Dallas Blast Toll Rises to Seven Dead

An Appeal

THIS community has been asked to contribute $1,300,000 to replace the 70-year-old, condemned main building of Children's Hospital.

With the campaign concluding, the amount raised is approximately $825,000, or less than two thirds of the amount needed.

It is incredible that a community the size of Washington should not have oversubscribed the first appeal for help made by this wonderful institution in three quarters of a century. Boston is now making a like appeal for a new children's hospital and most of the 10 million dollars asked has been subscribed.

WE challenge any citizen of Washington to spend one hour in Children's Hospital and not come away with the conviction that here is one of the finest institutions in our country. If there is anything more appealing than a sick child we do not know what it is. The day does not pass at Children's but some near-miracle is wrought to save a child.

This campaign must not fail.

THERE are many persons of large income in Washington who have not responded to this appeal. We ask them to spend one hour at Children's. That generous contributions will follow is automatic.

There are many citizens of moderate means who have not given the matter thought who will be glad to help once they know how desperately their support is needed.

There are many business firms and institutions in Washington where a quick little campaign will net a great deal of money. Start one today.

Checks should be made out to "Children's Hospital Building Fund" and sent direct to the hospital, 13th and W sts. nw.

These are our children—they shall not want.

Part of Case Bill Back at White House

Senate Passes Hobbs 'Racket' Measure, Vetoed as Rider, Without Debate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday tossed back to the President the first big chunk of the vetoed Case bill—labor "antiracketeering" legislation.

Without a single word of debate, the House-approved Hobbs bill was called up and passed by the Senate in precisely the same form the bill recently went to the President as a Case bill rider.

Making it a felony to obstruct, delay of interfere "by robbery or extortion" with movement of any goods in interstate commerce, the legislation imposes penalties up to $10,000 or 20 years in jail.

Expect Signature

House and Senate authors voiced belief the President will sign this first divorced segment of the sweeping Case legislation—claimed a two-thirds majority to override any unexpected veto.

Abandoning any omnibus move to revive the broad scope of the Case bill, Senate supporters of the parent measure meanwhile sought to salvage one other isolated section—the ban on foremen's unions.

They plan to reach so-called "supervisory employes" indirectly by a limitation on NLRB funds carried in the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill—now pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The new ban would deny use of NLRB funds for handling any petitions by unions of supervisory workers.

Present Outlook

Following days of post-mortem conference on the vetoed Case bill, the labor legislation outlook at the Capitol fell into this pattern:

1. Curtains for the President's House-and-Senate passed emergency antistrike bill, which probably will be allowed to die on the House Speaker's table.

2. Senate passage in compromise form of Truman-requested authority for six-months, joint committee study of general labor legislation, already approved by the House.

Twice Passed by House

The Hobbs bill, twice passed by the House before the Senate wrote it into the Case bill by a vote of 59 to 22, cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee as separate legislation early this week.

Yesterday Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.), one of the President's closest friends, moved approval at the close of a busy Senate day. Not a Senator rose to discuss it. Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), in the chair, put the question, following a quorum call. There was a chorus of "Ayes"—no audible "Nays."

41 Injured As Explosion Rocks Hotel At Mid-Day

No Guests Are Killed, Management Says; Source of Disaster Given as Basement

Dallas, Tex., June 21 (AP).—A terrific noon hour explosion that shook downtown Dallas today demolished the basement and part of the first floor of the Baker Hotel, killing 7 persons and injuring 41 others.

Screams of panic followed, as employes and guests, some trapped in the basement, rushed from the hotel through lung-burning fumes and smoke.

The blast apparently occurred in the basement just under the coffee shop, where a new icing unit was being installed.

No Guests Killed, Says Hotel

[The hotel management said that no guests was killed and none suffered serious injuries, according to the United Press. A few suffered slightly from ammonia fumes.—Editor's note.]

Some employes escaped through manholes. Guests from the upper floors were evacuated quickly and safely. Two of the injuries occurred when two excited girls stepped in front of a police car rushing to the scene.

Heavy, acrid smoke pouring from the building forced firemen to don gas masks. Once inside, they were further hampered by a slippery footing of food and an estimated $8000 to $10,000 in beer and liquor.

The search for possible other victims continued late today in the shambles of the three levels of the basement comprising the kitchen, laundry and wine cellar.

Messenger Boy Saves 3

Fire damage was slight.

The 5 million dollar, 600-room hotel was opened in 1925.

Jack McDonald, messenger boy, pulled three men from the fume-filled basement to safety.

"I was riding down Jackson st. on my bicicle and got even with the hotel just as the explosion came," he said. "The blast blew both me and the bicycle on the opposite side of the street from the hotel."

Plan to Disarm Japan Leaves Russia Silent

U. S. 25-Year Program Received Favorably By Britain and China

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States yesterday unveiled a plan for four victorious powers to keep Japan military impotent for at least a quarter century—but deep Russian silence rendered its fate uncertain.

Great Britain warmly welcomed the plan in principle, a dispatch from London said. China was reported to favor it. But Russia, the other power which would take part in the control system, has not yet reacted, although the plan was sent to Moscow and the other capitals early in April.

Under the American proposal, made public by the State Department, the United States would cut the other powers in on the job of controlling Japan at the end of the present, full-scale occupation.

The idea was first broached in April, at the time Secretary Byrnes made his practically identical proposal for long-term policing of Germany.

Oppose Plan for Germany

The Russians, saying nothing on the Japanese proposition, have actively opposed the plan for Germany. Foreign Commissar Molotov has assailed it as an American device for bringing about a condition in which American troops could be pulled out of Germany at a very early date. American officials argue that the end of the present occupation of Germany would not be predetermined by a treaty for long-range control.

Some officials here, however, believe that such a treaty might clear the way for earlier replacement of present relatively large occupation armies with small, highly trained inspection and control forces.

State Department officials said Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander in Japan, has been fully informed of the provisions of the suggested treaty but no word has come in showing his reactions.

MacArthur Is Boss

A shift to control commission direction would be a dramatic swing in American policy for Japan. There is a four-power agency in Tokyo, and other interested nations are members of a Far Eastern commission to develop policy, but the actual authority is American, exercised by MacArthur.

The initial occupation period under MacArthur is supposed to rid Japan of all its armed forces, its bases and its factories for military production. Picking up at that point, the proposed 25-year treaty would have these main purposes and functions:

1. To keep Japan disarmed completely, allowing only a civil police force having small arms and such explosives as are needed for industrial purposes. The Japanes, as also in the case of the Germans, would be denied all atomic energy

Taft OPA Bill Amendment Is Approved

Permits Price Changes To Cover Higher Costs Of Manufacturers

By the Associated Press

Congress members working the OPA bill into final shape approved a provision yesterday revising price ceilings to cover higher manufacturing costs and then took up the question of removing certain controls entirely.

The Senate-House conference committee adopted with some modification the amendment by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) which requires that price ceilings for manufacturers must be high enough to cover their 1941 price plus the average cost increases in their industry since then.

The modification stipulates that the resulting price increases passed along to wholesalers, retailers and consumers shall be only the actual money increases, not the percentage increases. For example, if a manufacturer gained a 10 per cent increase on a $100 product so that his price to the wholesaler became $110, then the wholesaler could raise his price to the retailer by $10—not by 10 per cent of $110, or $11.

Whichever Is Higher

However, in industries where the OPA already allows percentage markups and discounts, the ceiling would be computed either under these allowances or under the new amendment, whichever would give the higher price.

So-called "reconversion items" such as automobiles, which were not manufactured during the war because of Government restrictions, would not be affected by the amendment. They are covered under other provisions of the bill which the committee has not reached.

The amendment appeared certain, however, to require the OPA to make wholesale changes of price ceilings. Stabilization Director Chester Bowles assailed it in its original form as "a delayed action bomb" and termed it one of the "most dangerous" in the bill.

The conference committee's action was taken upon the recommendation of a five-member subcommittee which considered the Senate's Taft amendment and the House's Wolcott amendment. The latter, by Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.) would have stipulated that manufacturers' ceilings must

Sweetheart's Plane Kills Girl as She Runs to Greet It

New London, Mo., June 21 (AP).—Miss Betty Ann Lyng, 20, was killed today by a low-flying plane piloted by her sweetheart, Howard Hampshire, 22, Hull, Ill., as she went out to greet him at her farm home south of here.

Robert E. Lyng, the girl's father, said she was running parallel to the plane's course when it apparently hit an air pocket and dipped toward the ground.

The girl was caught in the undercarriage of the plane, which crashed an instant later. Hampshire, a World War II veteran, suffered head and spinal injuries.

Band to Play, Public to Watch As Vinson Takes Oath Monday

By the Associated Press

Fred M. Vinson will be sworn in as Chief Justice of the United States at 11 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) Monday in an elaborate White House ceremony.

Plans for the oath-taking, on the south portico of the White House, were announced yesterday by Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross.

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, on which Vinson once served, will administer the oath.

Ross said the ceremony would be open to the public and that the gates would be open at 10:30 a. m.

In addition to Vinson's family, invitations have been extended to members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, Congress, the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Ambassador Carlos Martins of Brazil, and others.

House Speaker Rayburn will preside, and music will be furnished by the Navy Band.

When a reporter remarked that the plans were elaborate enough to approach those attending a presidential inauguration, Ross said they were intended to be.

John W. Snyder, who will replace Vinson as Secretary of the Treasury, will take his Cabinet oath at 11 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) Tuesday on the south portico of the Treasury Building.

Trieste Issue Again Topic Of Ministers

No Decision Reached; Molotov and Aides Are Guests of Byrnes

Paris, June 21 (AP).—The four-power Foreign Ministers Conference took up again today the key question of Trieste, but adjourned discussion until tomorrow after two hours without decision, an American informant said.

Two hours later, Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, his deputy Andrei Vishinsky and interpreter Vladimir Pavlov arrived at the American delegation's hotel for an intimate dinner with United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, State Department Counsellor Ben Cohen, and their adviser, Charles Bohlen.

Only a Coincidence

This dinner party in Byrnes' private suite was noted as the probable scene of a frank face-to-face parley by two of the chief figures in the conference, perhaps leading to a mutually satisfactory solution of tough items in the projected peace treaties.

American officials said the dinner was planned several days ago and it was only a concidence that it fell on the day the conference took up the question of Trieste—regarded as the key to four-power agreement on European peace.

The conference adjourned after only two hours because it was explained that the other Ministers realized Molotov was seeing Byrnes tonight.

Discussed From All Angles

The issues were freely discussed from all angles, but informants declined to disclose whether any new ideas, such as internationalization of Trieste, had been injected into the talks.

Byrnes made no new approach to the frontier question, American sources said. Originally the United States favored a line much to the east, giving Trieste and most of the Istrian Peninsula to Italy. The British favored a line only slightly less to the east. Later both approved the French line which would give Trieste to Italy but most of Istria to Yugoslavia.

The Russians want the line much to the west, giving Trieste, its hinterland and the Istrian Peninsula to Yugoslavia.

Wall St. Rallies After Wide Break

New York, June 21 (INS).—The stock market rallied today from its wide break of Thursday, with gains running to more that $1 a share in popular issues and as much as $13 a share in specialties.

Eastman Kodak, which led yesterday's sell-off with a $20 drop, climbed back to $242 for a net gain on the day of $13.50. Dupont, which tumbled $8 yesterday, closed $3.50 higher today.

The improvement was reflected all along the list, with steels, motors, mail orders an dsome of the rails active and stronger.

Jury Decides Millison Killed Mrs. Mahoney

Murder-Suicide Verdict Returned In Hotel Tragedy

Pretty Dorothy Mahoney was pushed from a ninth floor window of the Lafayette Hotel by her sweetheart before he followed her in a suicide leap, a coroner's jury decided yesterday.

The verdict, which resulted after 33 minutes' deliberation, was murder-suicide.

The body of Mrs. Mahoney, 25-year-old wife of an Army captain and mother of a 3-year-old daughter, plummeted from the window of room 915 shortly after midnight the morning of June 13.

A half hour later, Arthur D. Millison, 34, former garage owner and father of three children by his estranged wife, slashed his wrists and plunged from the window after throwing out a chair to disperse firemen who were attempting to spread a life net below him.

Six-Year Affair

Their deaths culminated a six-year affair that already was near a breaking point because of Mrs. Mahoney's announced intention of going to Europe to join her husband, Capt. Haynes Mahoney, who was then with occupation forces in Germany.

Captain Mahoney and his wife's mother, Mrs. Tabitha Cox, 2505 13th st. nw. left the inquest before the verdict was reached. Mrs. Cox who has steadfastly contended her daughter was murdered, reiterated that contention from the witness stand and said she believed Millison had planned their deaths the Sunday before the tragedy.

Captain Mahoney, tight-lipped throughout the inquest, was not called to the stand. He returned from Europe in time for his wife's funeral.

Woman Sells Isle in Bahamas To Love-Sick Flier for $12,000

London, June 21 (U.P.).—Mrs. Ronald Armstrong-Jones, whose husband bought her an island at a cocktail party, said today she did not know there was such a pent-up market for atolls until she advertised her "paradise island" for sale.

Mrs. Armstrong-Jones sold her island to a love-sick former royal Air Force pilot but not until she had been almost overpowered by the thousands who called, telephoned or telegraphed her in response to her advertisement.

She offered to sell her 250-acre island, called Strangers Quay, in the Abaco group of the Bahamas to the first person who could get to her with $12,000.

"It was like a bomb had hit the house," Mrs. Armstrong-Jones said. "I never expected it would be such a sensation. There were thousands who came all day and all night and kept on coming. Its really amazing."

They came with cash in hand, the island owner said. She sold to the one who got there first, E. D. Sparkes, 28, who said:

"You can say I'm doing it to get rid of an unhappy love affair . . ."

Sparkes added he also wanted to be close to America and "eventually I think the island will be a lovely place to live."

Armstrong-Jones, an attorney, bought her the island just before the war, at a cocktail party. She had longed to visit it but finally gave up hope and decided to sell it. Meantime, she has been renting it for $20 a year.

She said it is about 100 miles northeast of Palm Beach and that Green Turtle Quay is the nearest big island.

Freight Rate Rises Authorized by ICC

Carriers Expected To Benefit by Extra $290,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized emergency freight rate increases estimated to yield rail and water carriers about 390 million dollars more in gross revenue on an annual basis.

As a temporary measure the commission granted a general 6 per cent increase with exceptions for certain basic commodities. Eastern railroads received an additional 5 per cent hike to equalize their earnings with other carriers.

The new rates can become effective July 1 on three days' notice. They are much the same as the emergency freight rate increases authorized on March 2, 1942, and suspended by the commission on July 1, 1944. There are certain modifications, however.

Full Hearing Planned

The increases will remain in effect until the commission can hold a full hearing and make a decision on the carriers' request for a general 25 per cent boost with exceptions for certain basic commodities.

The commission turned down the railroads' request to make permanent now the 10 per cent passenger fare increase authorized in January, 1942. This is scheduled to expire six months after the legal termination of the war. It will be considered at the commission's hearing on the over-all question of freight and passenger rate increases.

The commission said the railroads "have shown that by reason of already effective increases in wages and in the prices of materials and supplies, and declining volume of freight traffic and revenues from passenger traffic, already experienced or in sight, some increases in their freight rates and charges are justified as just and reasonable and as necessary for carrying out the purposes of the national transportation policy declared by Congress."

Increases Are Temporary

It added, however, that "we do not pass upon the reasonableness and justness of the increases . . . authorized except as a temporary and emergency measure, pending the full hearing . . ."

The 6 per cent increase applies to all commodities except agricultural products, livestock and its products, and low-grade products of mines, such as sand, gravel, broken rock and slag. For these the increase approved is 3 per cent.

The 5 per cent hike for Eastern or official territory railroads does not apply to anthracite, bituminous coal, lignite and iron ore. Specific increases approved for these commodities are generally applicable over the whole country.

The rates on iron ore will be increased 2 cents per gross ton in the East and 3 cents in the Southern and Western districts and 3½ cents per ton net or gross, on interterritorial traffic.

Coal and Coke Increases

The increases permitted in 1942 on anthracite coal and coke will be further increased 3 cents per ton. The order adds 6 and 7 cents per net and gross ton to rates now $1 or less, and 8 and 9 cents per net and gross ton when the rates are more than $1.

Free pick-up and delivery service, the commission said, or allowance to the shipper for such service should not be afforded when the line-haul rate is less than 50 cents per 100 pounds.

The commission refused to speculate on the "net effect" of the increases except to say that its staff estimates that on the volume of traffic in sight the increase of gross revenue to the carriers will be about 390 million dollars annually.

OPA Director Paul Porter told a reporter he will need a few days of study before forecasting what effect, if any, the boosts will have on the prices of goods hauled by rail and water.

OPA Opposed Increase

At the commission's week-long hearings on the railroads' petition in May, OPA and the stabilization office came out flatly against any increases for at least a year, beyond the minimum required by law. The law requires the commission to set rates which will enable the railroads to provide adequate and efficient transportation service.

The two agencies contended then that rate increases could prove "disastrous" to the stabilization program.

Referring to the higher increase allowed Eastern railroads, the commission said their financial and traffic situation "as a whole justly and reasonably entitles them to relatively greater increases in their freight rates and charges" than other carriers.

The rate of return on the property investment of Eastern lines was 4.30 per cent in 1945, the commission said, compared with 5.89 for Southern carriers and 5.71 for Western railroads. It added:

"It would have required additional revenue to the amount of about 96 million dollars in 1945 to have brought the Eastern District to the same earning basis as the remaining lines."

Union Says Negotiations Are 'Phony'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The CIO Electrical Workers yesterday demanded that the Department of Labor immediately withdraw its conciliators form the Allis Chalmers Co., strike proceedings, on grounds that they were being used for strike-breaking purposes.

The charge contained in a telegram to Labor Secretary Schwellenbach, was based on alleged remarks of a company official which union members claim to have overheard.

According to Neil Brant, the union's Washington representative, union members in Milwaukee, Wis., where the principal strike-bound plant is located, heard from the next room a remark by a top company official that "we are only stalling here' in negotiations.

Negotiations Held "Phony"

The eavesdropped official was Harold "Buck" Storey, long-time labor relations official of the company. His alleged conversation, which Brant quoted in his telegram to Schwellenbach, was interpreted by him as outlining company strategy to open the doors of its struck plants next Monday.

Meantime, Brant said, conciliators were still trying to continue negotiations, at the insistence of the Labor Department, even though no progress had resulted for three weeks.

In these "phony negotiations," Brant argued, "the Department of Labor is being used for evil purposes." His contention was that the company, one of the Nation's principal producers of farm machinery, was attempting to stimulate a continuance of negotiations so that the Government would not seize the plants and in the interim the workers would be "starved out."

The seven plants of the company, employing 25,000 to 30,000, have been struck for more than two months, in the country's largest single work stoppage. The first walkout too kplace March 14 at the LaPorte, Ind., factory. Others were shut down in succeeding weeks, until the strike was complete by April 20. Besides the UEW, the CIO United Auto Workers represent labor at some of the factories.

Plant Seizure Debated

Meantime, it was reported yesterday that President Truman was urged at his Cabinet meeting to issue a statement that he Government will not seize the plants.

Some of those who attended the session told reporters that at least one Cabinet member expressed the opinion that an official notice to this effect might lead to a settlement.

Brant's comment on this report was that it sounded just like the company's strategy—to force the workers back when they realized they could not expect Government seizure.

reflect current cost plus "a reasonable profit."

After acting on this feature, the conference committee passed on to consideration of the provisions voted by the Senate which would remove price controls from meat, milk, butter, cheese and poultry. Bowles declared these "so obviously disastrous that I am confident that they will be eliminated."

While the committee continued work against the June 30 deadline, when the present act expires, Philip Murray, president of the CIO, called upon President Truman and urged him to take the leadership in the "preservation of a decent, strong OPA."

Murray said he had not been approached by Administration officials on a proposal that labor give a no-strike pledge in exchange for effective price controls.

Manchurian Truce Extended Eight Days on Chiang's Order

Nanking, June 21 (AP).—An eight-day extension of the Manchurian truce was ordered by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today, but prospects o fa permanent settlement of China's civil strife were dimmed by an apparent deadlock in peace negotiations here.

New differences developing during the recent peace talks appeared to have left the rival factions farther apart than when the truce began June 7.

The chief Communist negotiator, Chou En-Lai, told a press conference that his party saw no way to accept the government's demand that Red forces evacuate certain North China areas. The government's proposal for division of central Manchuria likewise was unacceptable, he said.

Chou declared that the government's idea seemed to be to achieve a division of Communist strength by "pushing us away from large cities and rail lines, surrounding us in small towns, so that when the time comes the government may eliminate our forces."

Another factor blocking any long-term agreemeent, Chou asserted, was the Government's insistence that United States General Marshall be given power to arbitrate disputes, and that all actions of the Committee of Three or executive (truce) headquarters be decided by majority vote. The Communists contend the decisions should be unanimous.

The Manchurian truce, originally limited to 15 days, would have expired Saturday. Its extension to June 30 was regarded as a concession to the Communists, who have been demanding an unlimited truce pending the conclusion of peace and unification talks here.

Senate Continues War Powers Act For Nine Months

A nine-month extension of the broad powers the Government now has to allocate and raton commodities was approved yesterday by The Senate.

Without a record vote it passed legislation continuing in modified form until March 31, 1947, the second War Powers Act of 1942. On this act rests the Government's authority to ration commodities in short supply and establish priorities on their purchase.

The measure, already passed by the House, must return there for action on a Senate amendment stipulating that nothing in it is to be construed as granting authority to establish price celings. This authority is in the OPA Act, extension of which is now before a Senate-House committee.

Canada to Seize Shipping Concerns

Ottawa, June 21 (AP).—The Canadian government announced today that, effective Monday, it was seizing control of 29 shipping companies owning 100-odd ships on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence waterway which have been tied up in a month-old strike threatening food shipments to Europe.

The strike, already has put Canada far behind in obtaining coal and fuel oil from the United States for next winter, and the government has had to enforce consumption restrictions in anticipation of a continued short supply. The strike began May 24, the Canadian Seamen's Union contending that the companies after lengthy negotiations had refused the 8-hour day.

Church-sponsored daily vacation Bible schools will begin sessions in the Washington area Monday.

More than 10,000 Washington youngsters were reached by such schools in 1945, according to Mrs. Josephine H. Kyles, associate director of Christian education, Washington Federation of Churches.

"The summer vacation period serves as one of the greatest opportunities for intensive, constructive, Christian teaching through purposeful activities, work, study, fellowship and sharing, worship and play," said Mrs. Kyles, whose department is sponsoring about 200 daily vacation Bible schools, with the cooperation of all denominations.

Thirty-four congregations comprising the D. C. Baptist Convention will sponsor 37 daily vacation Bible schools starting Monday, with sessions Mondays through Fridays from 9 a. m. until noon. There will be 800 principals and faculty members. Last year's Baptist enrollment was 3521.

Women Want Law To Make Owners Keep Dogs Chaste

Los Angeles, June 21 (U.P.).—"planned parenthood" for dogs was advocated today by ladies of the Humane Education League, distressed by unwanted puppies roaming the streets.

The league gave petitions carrying 11,000 signatures to the city's public health and welfare committee.

Mrs. Althea Musser, secretary, said 23,862 unwanted dogs were destroyed last year by the "i" pound.

"The city should adopt laws to punish dog owners who don't keep their pets in line with propriety," she declared.

The committee took the morals code under advisement, after Richard Bonner of the humane department said it wuold be constitutional but not enforceable.

Stewart Kin Takes Life

London, June 21 (AP).—A verdict of suicide was returned today in the death plunge of Princess Nadejda de Braganca, 36, member of an ancient Portugese royal family and a granddaughter of the New York banker, the late William Rhinelander Stewart. The princess fell to her death from the fourth floor of Guy's Hospital June 13.

Favor White, Police Urged In Baltimore

Baltimore, June 21 (AP).—Baltimore City poice being asked to vote for John S. White, of Prince Georges County, for Maryland attorney general in the Democratic pricary Monday, it was disclosed today.

Cards bearing White's printed name have been sent to policemen on the department's personnel list, which Commissioner Hamilton Atkinson says is available to politicians.

White, speaker of the house of delegates, is running for the attorney general nomination on the ticket of Representative H. Streett Baldwin, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Conor, himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate, said he had no comment on use of the police roster for campaign purposes.

Earlier, it had been disclosed that Frank F. J. Daily, president of the board of police examiners, had circularized city policemen asking them to vote for the ticket headed by State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, another candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

White was reported campaigning tonight and effort sto locate him for a statement were fruitless.

TREATY

materials except under rigidly controlled conditions.

Inspection System

2. To carry out the disarmament control program the four powers would set up a joint inspection system under the control commission and the agents of that commission could go into any part of Japan and investigate anything which might bear upon armament problems.

3. To compel Japan, before she could get present occupation forces out of the country, to agree to these rigid controls and disarmament policies so that if later she sought to rearm in any way she would be guilty of violating the treaty.

4. To bind the United States, Russia, Britain and China to take action to enforce the disarmament program by land, sea and air forces as necessary and to negotiate special agreements providing in detail the forces which would be placed under the control commission for constant work in Japan.

Source of Conflict

5. To continue the control system for 25 years from the day the treaty became effective, which would be the day that it was finally formally ratified by all four of the signatory powers. It might be renewed with or without modification but renewal, in the words of the proposed treaty itself, would depend on a decision as to "whether the Japanese people have so far progressed in the reconstruction of their life on a democratic and peaceful basis that the continued imposition of the controls defined herein is no longer necessary."

The present concentration of power in the hands of General MacArthur has been a source of conflict not only with Russia but to a lesser extent with Britain, Canada, Australia and other countries.

In suggesting form-power control the United States may be trying to meet some of these criticisms. There has been some suspicion here that the Russians, who have done much talking baout Japan, may have been genuinely concerned over the way things are going there and that once a different system is envisaged they may be more inclined to play ball in other areas.

Price of Preserves To Be Increased

Prices for quince, tomato and guava preserves are going up 3 to 4 cents a pound jar, effective June 26.

OPA said yesterday the increase will compensate producers for higher costs of materials.

Gen. Lee Given Degree

Bristol, England, June 21 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill conferred an honorary degree of doctor of laws on Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commander of the U. S. forces in the Mediterranean, at Bristol University. Lee was head of the U. S. Army Services of Supply for the European theater during the war.

British Charge Plot to Kidnap Palestine Chief

Jerusalem, June 21 (AP).—British troops uncovered a buried cache of illegal arms near a chemical plant on the northern shore of the Dead Sea today as military authorities charged a Jewish underground group with a plot to kidnap the British commander in chief in Palestine.

An army officer said troops, making an inch-by-inch search of the area, found a cache of 19 pistols, 7 submachine-guns, a mortar, 20 ammunition magazines and several thousand rounds of ammunition buried in a concrete chamber near the power house of the chemical plant at Kallia, a settlement of potash workers. Simcha Swerdleff, manager, was arrested. It was reported that 16 Jewish employes of the plant also were arrested.

British Army headquarters said it had uncovered evidence that Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground organization, had planned to kidnap Lieut. Gen. Sir Evelyn Barker, top British commander in the Holy Land, in addition to the six officers previously seized.

The search in the Jewish Bucharim quarter of northwest Jerusalem for clues to the whereabouts of the abductors of Maj. H. P. Chadwick was abandoned. He escaped from his kidnapers yesterday, but the fate of five officers seized in the coastal city of Tel Aviv remained undisclosed.

Meanwhile, an official announcement confirmed the arrest of a British officer in the fatal shooting of Amram Rosenberg, a 35-year-old Jew, on a Tel Aviv street Wednesday night. The officer was not identified.

Former KKK Chief Owes U. S. $350,000, Tax Court Rules

By the Associated Press

The United States Tax Court has ruled that Hiram W. Evans of Atlanta, former chief of the Ku Klux Klan, owes the Government about $350,000 in income taxes for the years 1937 through 1941.

Court records showed Evans paid approximately $8105.56 in taxes on earnings for the years involved from operations of a group of companies selling road building materials, with members of his family listed as partners.

The Government contended he should have paid $354,500.83 more.

Judge Samuel B. Hill, of the Tax Court, ruled against Evans on practically, all claims for deductions, and ordered attorneys for the Klan's former Imperial Wizard and the Internal Revenue Bureau to figure the exact amount due.

The decision said Evans ran these organizations as he pleased, earned the income and shifted the funds from one organization to another as his fancy dictated and also expended it as he chose."

Cloth for Mlilion Suits to Be Sold By WAA on July 10

The War Assets Administration yesterday tentatively set July 10 for the start of a nationwide sale of 7,500,000 yards of surplus fabrics, estimated sufficient to produce one million men's suits.

Veterans will get top priority in purchasing the cotton, woolen and worsted fabrics for use in their own small businesses, WAA said. The goods, originally made for military use, has been earmarked solely for makers of suits and overcoats.

The sale will continue for 20 days at WAA's 33 regional offices. If any remains unsold, manufacturers who do not qualify as veterans or small businesses will be permitted to buy.

Under Civilian Administration rulings, garments made from the cloth must be completed within 120 days and sold promptly within OPA ceiling prices.

Italy Grants Amnesty

Rome, June 21 (AP).—The Italian Cabinet today granted a broad amnesty calculated to free thousands from prisons, as the first act of the new republic. A complete amnesty was approved for political prisoners convicted from the day of liberation to June 18 this year, except for homicide. Anyone serving up to five years was freed. Death sentences were commuted to life imprisonment, and life imprisonment sentences were commuted to 30 years.

Dairy Group Meets

Ames, Iowa, June 21 (AP).—The American Dairy Science Association closed its annual three-day convention here last night with the presentation of awards for dairy improvement and research. A citation was awarded O. E. Reed, chief of the bureau of dairy industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

sation with his brother, Clyde, from the then-blood spattered hotel room, told of Mrs. Mahoney's death and of his suicide intention.

Conflict in Testimony

Yesterday's inquest heard conflicting statements on Millison's last conversation, but the jury's decision apparently was based on the one which quoted him as saying:

"I have disposed of Dottie and now I am going to kill myself."

Detective Sergt. Richard Felber of the homicide squad quoted Clyde Millison to that effect, but said that Millison subsequently changed his statemetn to exclude the possibility of murder.

From the witness stand yesterday, Clyde Millison told Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald of the telephone conversation and stated his brother had said: "Dottie has taken her life and now I'm going to take mine."

Police Pvt. Edwin F. Birrell, first officer in the room after the deaths, and one of two who tried to talk Millison out of his suicide leap, testified condition of the room indicated there had been a struggle.

Revolver in Room

Felber had testified that a foreign revolver found in the room had one mis-fit bullet in the firing chamber and that it showed evidence that the firing pin had struck, but failed to detonate it.

He also said a bottle of poison tablets were found in the room and two more of them, wrapped in tissue paper, were found in Millison's trousers pocket. The bloody razor blade which Millison used to slash his wrists also was found, Felber said.

Deputy Coroner Richard Rosenberg said Mrs. Mahoney died of a fractured skull and internal injuries, but that she had a "very deep slash" on the inside of her left hand.

Man Held for Grand Jury After Fatal Altercation

Herbert Murphy, 57, of 929 Kennedy st. nw., yesterday was ordered held for the grand jury in the death of 63-year-old Angelo Dell Erba, 5511 Illinois ave. nw.

Dell Erba died in Emergency Hospital Thursday after an altercation with Murphy Wednesday night. Murphy testified Dell Erba had followed him and Mrs. Murphy out of a tavern and refused to turn back. The altercation followed.

LABOR

ing act, the bill was drawn by Representative Sam Hobbs, (D., Ala.) following a 1942 Supreme Court decision. The court held the original act did not apply to unions using threats or violence to compel employment of local union drivers on trucks hauling farm produce over State lines.

Voiced Full Accord

In vetoing the Case bill, President Truman, June 11, voiced "full accord" with the objectives of the Hobbs section. He told Congress, however, that the bill should clearly state that strikes, peaceful picketing and other legitimate activities of labor unions not be made a felony.

Backers of the measure insisted this was already clearly stated in the bill and declined to change the wording. They pointed out that the bill already provides that nothing in it shall beconstrued to repeal, modify or affect rights guaranteed by the Clayton, Norris-LaGuardia, Railway Labor and Wagner acts.

MacArthur Aide Denies Roxas Helped Japs

Tokyo, June 21 (U.P.).—A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters today denied a charge by former Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes that President Manuel A. Roxas of the Philippines was a Japanese collaborationist, and denied that MacArthur had anything to do with Roxas' election to the Commonwealth Presidency.

Ickes charged in his syndicted column that MacArthur forced former President Sergio Osmena to make over his Cabinet to satisfy collaborationists.

"Secretary Ickes has been sadly misinformed," the spokesman said. "The story, in so far as General MacArthur is concerned, has no substance in fact."

Mother of Five Cleared In Husband's Death

Detroit, June 21 (U.P.).—Five tense, white-faced children who sat on a courtroom bench with fingers crossed for days while their mother was on trial for her life, cheered wildly today as the jury found her not guilty in her husband's death.

They leaped off the bench and into the arms of their mother, Mrs. Irene Pash, 29, who had admitted she shot her husband of 14 years last March 8 after he threatened to beat her.

Young Urges 4 Million for Recreation

By Al Hailey
Post Reporter

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday asked the District to get ready to spend four million dollars on places to play, swim and relax in gene...

He asked for three new year-around swiming pools, new structures for 31 recreation centers, improvements at eight other centers and 50 land improvement projects for the District Recreation Department.

Expansion of the recreation department was urged in the third section of General Young's six-year plan to bring Washington's public services up to meet the needs of a post-war population almost doubled during the war years.

Plans to spend 28 million dollars on sewage and refuse disposal which would reduce pollution of the Anacostia and Potomac rivers, lessen the danger of epidemics and help rid the city of rats also were announced yesterday.

Millions Used Centers

General Young placed high value on the District's recreation facilities in "keeping down juvenile delinquency and creating sound standards of citizenship among the young."

He cited figures showing an attendance at District recreational centers of 9,500,000—involving approximately half a million individuals of all ages.

The three new swimming pools would be located at the Randall, Taft and Georgetown recreation centers.

New recreation structures are asked for the Turkey Thicket, Hillcrest, Langdon Park, Rosedale, Georgetown, East Potomac Park, Hamilton, Lafayette, East Garfield Park, Watts Branch, Ridge, Kalorama Park, Palisades, Macomb, Fort Greble, Taft, Payne School, Noyes, Forest Hills, Buachanan, Virginia Avenue, Livingston, Reservoir, Eckington, Brentwood Village, Harrison School, Dakota, Hoover, Jamaica, Cardoza and Sexton playgrounds and recreation centers.

Improvements Asked

Structures would be improved at Coolidge, Chevy Chase, Lincoln, Park View, New York ave., Mitchell, Randall and Sherwood recreation centers.

The land improvement projects would include grading, drainage structures, fencing, surfacing, apparatus installation, facilities for night lighting of recreation areas, bleachers, drinking fountains and other landscape development.

General Young pointed out that of 91 recreation units now in operation, none is completed. The recreation department has been forced to spread its facilities throughout the city rather than bring a limited number of perfection.

While congratulating the department for "sound organization" of its facilities, General Young said the department is "land poor."

Haven't 'Cashed In'

"We are in the position of having a considerable investment in recreational areas which have been developed to only a limited degree or not at all," he said.

"In other words we have not yet 'cashed in' fully on capital expenditures thus far made. Additional expenditures will multiply the adequacy of our recreational facilities at a greater rate than the money figures indicate."

General Young differed with the views of the recreation department of money needed to finance the expansion plan for the next 6 years. He slashed the $7,500,000 asked to a total of $4,356,700.

Under th 1947 budget request for $356,000, the recreation department contemplates building five new recreation structures, improving three oth rs and undertaking 22 individual items of improvement.

Annual Cost Raised

The average annual cost of operating the department would be raised from $797,000 planned for 1947 to $1,200,000 per year for the 1948-52 fiscal years.

In his reports on sewage and refuse disposal, General Young asked $25,272,000 for the sewer division and $2,735,600 for refuse disposal.

The plan includes $21,795,000 for sewers to carry storm waters and excess loads and for construction of sanitary sewers.

General Young set up $300,000 for a six-year study of the possibility of separating the city's "antiquated combined mains," pointing out that this would bring a "great reduction in existing pollution of the Anacostia and Potomac Rivers."

He said that in Washington's early history, sewage and storm waters entered the same mains and was discharged untreated.

Also called for was $2,200,000 for addition to the Blue Plains sewage treatment plant.

"Untidy Habits" Hit

The report took to task citizens of the District whose "singularly untidy habits" place a heavy strain on the refuse divisions inadequate equipment in its attempts to keep streets and alleys in a creditable condition."

It called for a return to the pre-war schedule of thrice-weekly garbage collections during the four summer months and twice-weekly the remainder of the year.

Trash collections would be changed from once a week to twice a week. General Young called for further study of plans for removal of snow and ashes.

The stepped-up garbage and trash collections schedule, cut during wartime because of manpower shortage, was termed "essential."

"Both of these services have a direct bearing on public health, the prevention of epidemics and on the control of the rat nuisance," General Young said.

One third of our urban population live in slums, substandard and deterioating areas, according to a Twientieth Century Fund report.

Ransacking of Home Adds Emphasis To Lawyer's Plea for More Protection

Attorney Delos G. Smith now has emphasis in his arguments for more police protection against housebreakers.

While he was in the Eighth precinct station discussing the problem in Sprnig Valley, Smith's home was ransacked of clothing, jewelry and personal effects exceeding $200 value. He lives at 5126 Tilden st. nw.

Two days before the housebreaking, he had appealed for more police protection.

The Eighth precinct police said men on the beats were under instruction at the time to pay "special attention" to the area.

Smith, who lost more than $500 in jewelry to housebreakers last year, explained yesterday that he appealed for more police protection Tuesday because of two housebreakings in the same block within the last two weeks.

In one case June 8 thieves made away with $2500 in whisky and gems and in the second, last Monday, a resident of the block lost about $37 worth of silverware and household effects, according to police.

Smith was in the precinct station about 8 p. m. Thursday assisting one of his neighbors in filing a report to police and reminding the police of need for stepped-up patrol work when his home was invaded. His 18-year-old son Robert returned home to se two youths rush around the side of a neighboring house and make a getaway in a car, Smith said.

"It's about time the police wake up now," Smith declared yesterday. However, police reported that extra men have been assigned to the area, beginning last night.

Questions Answered On Examining Plans

ANSWERS: Civil Service yesterday answered many questions employes and agencies have had on its peacetime examining program leading to permanent appointments. It laid down these policies:

Kluttz

1. That time served by a war service indefinite appointee can be counted toward completion of the one-year probationary period, provided the time is immediately preceding the granting of a classified status, and that it is in the same agency and in a similar job for which the employe is certified.

2. War service eligibles will be certified to the agencies in which they are employed. This will prevent too much disruption in the service. However, war service people won't be certified until they are reached on the eligible register.

3. The "5-point spread" for war service people won't be used after the first round. This decision just about wipes out any preference war service people hoped to have for permanent jobs. It will work something like this: on the second call of eligibles from the register, an arbitrary "low point" will be fixed and all nonveteran war service people who are in the next five points will be certified.

4. War service people who do not complete, or who fail to qualify, can be displaced within 60 days.

STATE: The Senate yesterday adopted without a single protest the McCarran amendment which would give Secretary Byrnes absolute power to fire any State employe during the next year. The employe would be denied the right of appeal. The rider would suspend those sections of the Lloyd - La Follette and Veterans Preference Acts which give some small protection to Federal workers.

RETIREMENT: A House subcommittee is in favor of earlier retirements for employes with long service who are laid off. The Miller subcommittee yesterday recommended to the full House Civil Service Committee that it amend the Forand bill to provide:

1. That an employe with 25 or more years of service who has or will be laid off between August 14, 1945, and August 14, 1947, through no fault of his own be permitted to retire on a Civil Service pension, and

2. That the full annuity be reduced 2 per cent a year for each year the employe is under the optional retirement ages of 60 and 62. This reduction figures out at one-sixth of 1 per cent a month.

The full committee will meet on it next week. On Monday the Morse bill will be called up in the House. It would permit employes who are retired prior to January, 1942 to draw larger pensions.

NOTES: Civil Aeronautics is seeking 500 mechanic-examiners. . . The Navy's hydraulic office is seeking additional officers, regular and reserve . . . At Justice, George Haddock is the new assistant chief of the trial section in Anti-Trust, and Joe Herberg is the new chief of the Anti-Trust Chicago office . . . At Retaining and Reemployment, Robert K. Salyers is the new assistant administrator in charge of field operations.

STRIKE: Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) yesterday asked for further information on the antistrike rider to the Navy appropriation bill. He didn't press the point when Senator Overton (D., La.) explained that a similar rider had been attached to other money bills.

On the House side, there are new reports that a substitute rider is being drafted by members of the House Appropriations Committee.

SENATE: Senator Byrd (D., Va.) is now alert to protect the limitation on the number of Federal workers as carried in the Pay Act. Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) sought to exempt Interior employes who are engaged in health, life and property activities from the ceiling provision. Byrd kicked it on a point of order.

VETERANS: Civil Service has asked all recruiting agencies to file with it a list of vacancies. This information will be available at its own information office, 7th and F sts. nw., and at the veterans and warworkers information center at 1350 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

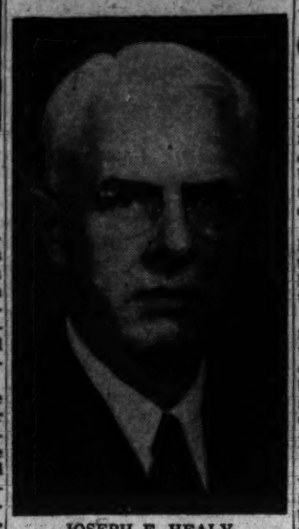
If the agencies cooperate, jobhunters will be saved a lot of shoe leather and the agencies a lot of time in talking with people.

TREASURY: The complete count can't be made of the ballots for employe member of its board of efficiency ratings. A ballot box has been lost. WAA: Col. George Monson is going back to the Pacific for the Marines. He has resigned as assistant administrator of War Assets. He was in charge of budget and personnel.

CIVIL SERVICE: Representative Rees (R., Kas.), yesterday charged it with giving the same competitive tests to CAF-2's and CAF-7's. He said this was done in the recent typist-stenographer test.

"This present commission policy," he told the House, "is grossly unfair and unjust to the thousands of permanent Civil Service employes who have been working for the Government more than six years."

Named President Of Va. Bankers



JOSEPH E. HEALY,

president of the City National Bank of Hampton who was named president of the Virginia State Bankers Association yesterday

Va. Bankers Elect J.E.Healy President

Virginia Beach, Va., June 21 (AP).—Joseph E. Healy, president of the Citizens National Bank of Hampton, was elected president of the Virginia Bankers Association today at the group's fifty-third convention. He succeeds Pressley Warren Anderson, executive vice president of the National Bank & Trust Co. of Marshall.

Warren M. Goddard, vice president of the State Planters Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond, was named first vice president, and C. Francis Cocke, president of the First National Exchange Bank of Roanoke, second vice president.

Six new members were elected to serve with six holdovers of the board of directors. They are W. P. Lifsey of Portsmouth, William A. Trotter, jr., Clarksville; Giles H. Miller, jr., Culpeper; G. J. Dearborn, Amherst; A. C. Hankla, Radford, and Vernon W. Sanders, Warsaw.

Collins Presents Resolution

Cocke accepted on behalf of himself and Dr. Francis P. Gaines, chairman of the War Finance Committee for Virginia, a resolution adopted by the General Assembly in recogntiion of their leadership in the promotion and sale of war bonds in the State during the war. The resolution was presented to Cocke, who was vice chairman of the committee, by Lieut. Gov. L. Preston Collins, a guest at the convention.

Cocke then presented certificates of distinguished service to the 12 members of the VPA's war bond committee. They are A. E. Anderson of Bristol; Harold G. Brown, Winchester; Fred C. Buck, Abingdon; Roy W. Dudley, Norfolk; Frank W. Evans, Norfolk; R. Page French, Richmond; R. H. Goode, Chase City; Scott Nesbit, Lynchburg; Jack W. Nurney, Suffolk; Giles H. Miller, Lynchburg; G. C. McCall, Norton, and W. G. Waring, West Point.

Urged to Sell U. S. Bonds

Robert W. Coyne, a consultant to the savings bonds division of the U. S. Treasury Department, urged the bankers to encourage the public to continue buying savings bonds because, he said, keeping the national debt spread among 85 million persons is the most effective insurance against repudiation of the debt.

The convention will close tomorrow after a brief business meeting at which former Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., will be the principal speaker.

Three Executed For Va. Murder

Richmond, Va., June 21 (AP).—A triple execution took the lives of three convicted Negro men during the early morning hours today at the State Penitentary.

All three of the Princess Anne County men had been found guilty of the robbery-slaying of Winston Mason, Negro cab driver.

First to die in the electric chair was George Grissett, 33, who was pronounced dead at 7:42 a. m. The second was James Hough, 29, at 8:05 a. m., and Arthur Johnson, 23, the third, was pronounced dead at 8:29 a. m.

Wayesboro Plant Delayed by CPA

A Dupont Co. application for permission to construct a $5,500,000 rayon plant at Waynesboro, Va., has been denied for the time being by the Civilian Production administration.

Disclosing this yearday, an agency spokesman said the company was notified June 10 that the application could not be considered until the shortage of building materials ahs eased.

W. L. Geppert Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow

Cumberland, Md., June 21 (AP).—William L. Geppert, 63, managing editor of the Cumberland News for the past 11 years, who died yesterday in Memorial Hospital following an illness of several months, will be buried Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Rose Hill Cemetery here.

The Rev. David C. Watson, rector of Emanuel Episcopal Church, will officiate at the services at the home.

Testimony Ends in Trial Of Rollins

Annapolis, Md., June 21 (AP).—Testimony ended today in the Navy general court-martial of Chief Steward Walter W. Rollins on charges of sex offenses, theft, embezzlement, and miscoduct, when the defense rested its case after calling only four witnesse.

Rollins, 47-year-old Virgins Islands Negro who pleaded innocent to all charges at the beginning of his trial 15 days ago, did not take the stand in his own behalf.

After the prosecution's announcement this morning that its presentation was complete, the defense opened with character testimony by three admirals, one of whom appeared in person. Two suubmitted depositions.

Defense Uses Diagrams

The defense climaxed its case when it succeeded in introducing in evidence two diagrams, drawn by a naval academy civil engineer. These purported to show that a key prosecution witness could not have seen all he claimed he observed when peering into Rollins' quarters through an opening in the wall.

Curtis Carter, Negro enlisted man who served under Rollins at the North Severn officers mess, had testified he saw the chief and Mrs. Margaret A. Sima, jr., blonde wife of a Naval Academy bandsman, together in Rollins' room while Mrs. Sima was partially disrobed.

John H. H. Poole, senior civil engineer at the academy, said that measurements taken at the scene after the hole about a ventilating duct had been filled indicated Carter could not have observed Mrs. Sima and Rollins in the spot he said he did.

Basis of Calculation

Poole aperture of 2 inches—estimated on the basis of cement fillings. He had not seen the actual hole through which Carter and another prosecution witness said they peered last summer.

Twice the prosecution moved to strike his testimony from the record on grounds he was "weighing evidence," a prerogative of the court. The tribunal denied both motions.

It also refused a defense request to inspect the scene at the North Severn Club.

The first defense witness was Vice Admiral Arthur W. Radford, deputy chief of naval operations for air, under whom Rollins had sereved on several occasions, the last time at the naval air station offices mess at Trinidad.

Knew Rollins For Years

The admiral, who said he had known Rollins between 10 and 15 years, testified the chief steward's general reputation was "excellent" as far as he knew, that his performance of duty had been satisfactory, and that he had displayed a high standard of financial and personal integrity.

Similar statements were made in Rollins' behalf by Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, former superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Rear Admiral Samuel G. Binder.

Other defense witnesses included a Naval Academy officer who testified Aaron Wilson, a Negro enlisted man who had worked under Rollins at North Severn, now was awaiting a bad conduct discharge, which Wilson had denied on the witness stand.

Wilson had told the court he had seen Rollins and a blonde woman, both clad in bathrobes, one night in the North Severn Club's basement, and that Rollins once pointed to Mrs. Sima with the remark, "How do you like my blondie?"

Mrs. Sima, called as a prosecution witness, denied she had ever been alone with Rollins.

The tribunal will head final arguments of counsel on Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Identifies Luray Crash Pilot

Luray, Va., June 21 (AP).—Sheriff Abram Brubaker of Luray said today he had received confirmation that the pilot who crashed into the Blue Ridge Mountains near here Wednesday was Roy J. Sturgeon of Norfolk.

Sturgeon was flying a Navy plane from Norfolk to Wisconsin. He took off from the Glenrock Flying School at Norfolk early Wednesday morning. An official of the Reedsburg Food Corp. at Lake Delton, Wisc., identified only as a Mr. McBoyle, who had purchased the Navy plane and another aircraft, left at the same time in the second ship.

Beltsville Cow Wins Md. Butterfat Record

Brattleboro, Vt., June 21.—A State production record has been made by a registered Holstein-Friesian cow owned by United States Dairy Division, Beltsville, The Holstein-Friesian Association of America announced today.

Lady-Hark Burk Pieb Gerb Col Johanna 2375165 is the new champion, taking the lead for all of Maryland's junior 2-year-old Holsteins, milked three times daily in the yearly division, advanced registry test, with the production of 763 pounds of butterfat from 17,991 pounds of milk.

Testing was supervised by Extension Service, University of Maryland and the association.

Frederick 'Prospectors' Use Shovels to Exploit Coin Cache

Frederick, Md., June 21 (Spl.).—Frederick County "prospectors" were at work today with pick and shovel seeking to determine whether a cache of gold and silver coins, found near Knoxville this week, had been fully exploited.

The cache was found beneath a rock just west of the town along an old country road by Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's employes who were opening a clogged culvert under the railroad tracks.

Residents of Knoxville, where excitement rose to high pitch over the find, said they could not determine the full value of the cache, apparently placed under the rock in Civil War days since the coins bore dates of 1850 and thereabouts. However, Mrs. Nora Benner, who said her son was one of those making the discovery, estimated it at around $800.

Three railroad employes, who were working at the scene, were believed to have pocketed the largest part of the cache, town residents said. The money was $5 and $10 gold pieces and 25 and 50-cent coins.

Charles Hill, who said he rushed to the scene when the cry went up: "Gold has been discovered," declared he found 10 quarters and two half-dollars bearing 1835 and 1854 dates.

There were reports that persons working with a crane scooped up a bucket full of coins. Principal discoverers of the money, "won't tell" how much they pocketed, residents asserted.

Some of the coins were reported found in the stream that passes under the culvert, Mrs. Benner said, and a search was continuing today.

8 Youths Held In Burglaries Near Ft. Meade

Baltimore, June 21 (AP).—Eight members of a gang of Negro youths who State police said were organized as the "X-9 Club" and headed by a boy called "Big Fat, jr.," were heled today for a series of burglaries near Fort George G. Meade.

Pending a hearing in juvenile court at Annapolis, the boys were held at the Waterloo State police sub-station.

They were rounded up last night in a raid on their club headquarters here by State Police Corpl. M. E. Jackson, State Trooper Ray Tuntzberry and City Detective Joseph M. Burke.

The boys were accused of burglarizing various stores, restaurants and amusement places in a section known as "Boomtown" on the highway bordering Fort Meade.

"They've been driving us crazy for the last year or so," said Corporal Jackson, adding that most of the youths were at one time or other shoe-shine boys in "Boomtown."

Jackson said the raiders found a roster of "X-9 Club" members and more arrests were expected.

He said they also found a buried suitcase full of cheap jewelry. Estimates of the loot stolen over a period of about a year ranged from several hundred to several thousand dollars.

$5000 Damages Awarded in Suit Against Attorney

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 21 (Spl.).—A jury in Circuit Court here yesterday, after a brief deliberation, awarded Miss Kathleen Raines, this city, $3000 in compensatory and $2000 punitive damages in her suit against P. O. Faulkner, attorney, this city, for alleged assault in his offices here where she had testified she had gone for professional advice.

Faulkner took the stand in his own behalf and corroborated her story as to the visit except as to the allegation that he had kissed her against her will. He denied the allegation flatly.

Miss Alma Snyder, to whom the plaintiff is said to have confided her story soon after the visit, was placed on the stand in rebuttal.

Mrs. Virginia Nicely, a relative of the defendant, who said she was in an outer office at the same time on business and that the door to the inner office where the incident is said to have occurred, was partly open permitting her to view the inner room, testified she did not notice any action of the defendant that was reprehensible.

Motions for arrest of judgment and asking a new trial were made following the jury's report.

Wheat Crop In Maryland Near '45 Level

A wheat crop of 6,840,000 bushels was estimated yesterday for Maryland based on the June 1 condition of the crop.

That figure would be slightly under the total of 6,864,000 bushels produced last year and also would fall below the 10-year (1935-44) average production of 7,592,000 bushels.

The Maryland crop reporting service made the estimate, at the same time predicting rye production of some 285,000 bushels—15,000 bushels more than a year ago and well above the 10-year average of 242,000 bushels.

On the basis of June 1 conditions and prospective planted acreage, the oats crop was put at an estimated 1,161,000 bushels, and barley production was estimated at 1,950,000 bushels.

The reporting service said that the June 1 condition of tame hay was the highest since 1929, and the condition of pasture the highest since 1927.

Fruit crop prospects in Maryland were listed as "spotted," however, with a "fair to heavy" apple crop expected in Western Maryland and only a fair crop on the Eastern Shore. The peach crop was estimated at 367,000 bushels and the pear crop at 23,000.

B. & O. Workers Oppose Pa. Law Reducing Hours

Cumberland, Md., June 21 (AP).—A resolution passed at the final session of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clarks of the entire Baltimore & Ohio Railroad system ordere dthe executive to oppose a Pennsylvania law cutting the working hours of women to 40 hours weekly.

Lawrence Hewitt, chairman of the Cumberland division of the brotherhood, said the law will affect hundreds of women employed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Pennsylvania.

"These women are now working under contract between the railroad and the brotherhood calling for a 48-hour week," Hewitt said.

Under the terms of the legislation, which goes into effect July 1, these women would be disqualified from working, Hewitt said. The brotherhood will insist that the contract with the railroad calling fo ra longer week supersedes the Pennsylvania law, Hewitt declared.

Comptroller Cites Uses Of Md. Surplus

Annapolis, Md., June 21 (AP).—"There are plenty of places for the State' anticipated $7,500,000 surplus at the end of the fiscal year," Chief Deputy Comptroller Joseph O. C. McCusker declared today.

"Certainly if any tax relief in the way of income taxes or real estate is to be effected, the money can well be used."

Actually the anticipated surplus at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, will exceed 11 million dollars, but since 2 milion dollars will be deducted for a working fund and the 1947 budget calls for $1,667,000 more in appropriations than expected revenues, the real surplus will be about $7,500,000.

In discussing the fiscal situation, McCusker said that much higher revenues than anticipated contributed chiefly to the surplus. The excess was $6,945,000 above the estimates, with $3,104,000 in racing income figuring largely.

Besides, alcoholci beverages brough in $7,180,000 more than anticipated, the gross receipts tax on corporations $1,380,000, and the motor vehicle titling tax $310,000.

But the reversion of $786,000 by State Departments in unspent appropriations also played a part.

"If things hold up, we can expect excesses next year somewha in line with this year," McCusker commented.

"Of course, there will be five million dollars more needed for the postwar construction fund," he added.

The comptroller's office is now getting ready to wind up the State's fiscal year by receiving final reports from the various departments. The departments are given 10 day after the June 30 dayte in which to present their accounts.

Vepco Foremen To Vote on Union

Richmond, Va., June 21 (AP).—Foremen of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. will vote July 5 as to whether they desire to be represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers or no union at all.

The election was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board on June 7, which at the time held that the foremen constitute an appropriate unit for collective bargaining, an dthe July date of the election was announced yesterday by J. C. McIntosh, international representative of the IBEW.

Jury Acquits Floyd Madison

Baltimore, June 21 (AP).—Floyd Madison, 21-year-old Maryland State penitentiary convict, was found innocent late last night of the knife slaying of Theodore R. Quesenbury, a fellow prisoner, following a prison ball game last May 5.

A criminal court jury returned the verdict of acquittal after deliberating more than three hours.

Madison, who is serving a 12-year sentence from Prince Georges County, greeted the verdict with a slight smile and a "thank you" to Judge E. Paul Mason, who presided at the three-day trial.

Martinsburg Ships Food for Famine

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 21 (Spl.).—The 1700 cans of foodstuffs collected for the Emergency Relief Committee here for famine relief was shipped yesterday after packaging by teen-agers who helped in the drive, under direction of Henry Noll, and sent to Baltimore.

Capt. Melvin Jewett, drive chairman, announced that $1810 had been collected in cash so far.

Hearing Set on Page Electoral Registrars

Luray, Va., June 21 (AP).—Judge H. W. Bertram of Page County Circuit Court today set Friday as the date for a hearing on a writ of mandamus which would compel the county electrical board to reappoint 11 Republican registrars.

The action was taken after Judge Bertram dismissed a motion filed by I. R. Dovel, attorney for Cletus Lamb and 10 other GOP registrars, asking the board to show cause why the reppointments were not made.

In filing the show cause order, Dovel said he was asking for a court interpretation of the Virginia statute which declares that "every registrar shall be compelled to Serve two terms." Judge Bertram said he could not give such an interpretation but that it was his opinion that the law contradicted itself in several instances.

Clarke County Bank Elects Coiner Chairman

Berryville, Va., June 21 (Spl.).—E. G. Coiner has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Bank of Clarke County. Mr. Coiner is the oldest member in point of service on the bank's directorate.

Husband Held For Md. Jury In Wife's Death

Cumberland, Md., June 21 (AP).—Nile J. Michael, 45, of Oldtown Roard, Cumberland, was remanded to the Allegany County jail today on a charge of murder to await the ction of the October grand jury, after his arraignment before Trial Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, jr.

The murder charge, preferred by State's Attorney Organ C. Harris, is the outgrowth of the death of Michael's wife, Mrs. Irene Michael, 34.

Harris presented evidence to show that Mrs. Michael died from a skull fracture, a contusion of the brain and a slow intracranial hemorrhage, allegedly suffered as a result of beink kicked in the head by Michael.

A report of the autopsy on the woman's body was read to the court by Dr. Benedine Skitarelic, pathologist at Memorial Hospital, who described the head wounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Buckley, of Oldtown Rord, testified they saw Michael kick his wife in the head.

Mrs. Michael died Wednesday in Memorial Hospital. Her husband was taken into custody Tuesday when he visited his wife at the hospital. She was taken to the institution Saturday night.

$2,055,000 Bid Offered on Va. Road Work

By the Associated Press

The Virginia State Highway Department announced the low bid yesterday totaling $2,$55,000 for a series of projects on and tying in with the Shirley Memorial Highway, an expreess highway development fro mthe War Department's Pentagon Building south to Woodbridge.

The projects are south of Route 7 in Fairfax County on tthe 13-mile stretch that remains to be built by the State on tthe Memorial Highway that will carry through traffic around the City of Alexandria. The Federal Government has built several miles of the highway at the northern end.

Nello L. Teer Co., of Durham, N. C., submitted the only bids on the Memorial Highway project. On the first project the company submitted a figure of $921,993.23 for 1.4 miles of grading and draining including a bridge over Accotink Creek and an overpass over Route 350 south of Route 236, and 1.5 miles of service treatment and macadam ramps and connections including an overpass over Route 642, bridge over Pohick Creek and an overpass at the District of Columbia Reformatory railroad siding.

Md. Benefits Not Political, O'Conor Says

Annapolis, Md., June 21 (AP).—Governor O'Conor asserted today that political considerations did not enter a decision of the Unemployment Compensation Board, saying "the case was decided upon the merits and the decision announced before and not after the election."

The board refused unemployment benefits to 4000 Sparrows Point workers of Bethlehem Steel Co. after a test case hearing on the claim of Harold D. Saunders, a steel worker, who sought payments for February 18-26 during a work stoppage.

The workers contended they were idle because of lack of work, but the board held their absence a continuance of a stoppage due to a labor dispute.

The chief executive declared "if politics were involved, it would have been a simple matter to let the case rest until after the primaries."

"The fact is that the single issue involved was one upon which different viewpoints could be expressed. But the board was guided by the weight of opinion cited from various States and made the ruling according to their best judgment."

BARNABY — By Crockett Johnson

This is the watch I got at the dinner—What is it, Barnaby?
Gosh, Pop. You didn't take my Fairy Godfather with you.
And you forgot to get a watch for McSnoyd, the Invisible Leprechaun.
I, er, didn't think it was necessary. He's invisible—
So I'm sure he'll be pleased with an invisible watch—
John!
Er, concentrate on the logic of Mr. Baxter's position, McSnoyd.
Noits, O'Malley. I ain't making no public statements. But I'm thinking me private thoughts.

Poles Seek Cats and Run Into Snarls

New York, June 21 (U.P.).—Somebody in Poland wants 1500 mousers and the American Feline Society is all ready to oblige but there are international complications.

"We got word several days ago that Poland needed cats to meet a dire rat situation," said Robert L. Kendell, New York feline head.

The society got the Air Transport Command on the phone. Gen. Harold George said he could arrange to fly the cats as far as Berlin. After that it was Warsaw's problem.

The State Department says it can't fly cats this month from Berlin to Warsaw—it's used up a 5000-pound monthly quota already.

The Polish Embassy in Washington is taking it up with the Foreign Office. They're trying to trace down who requested the tomcats and who'll look after them once they arrive.

Where will the Feline Society get its cats?

"Most of them will come from the adoption service," said Kendell. "Good, tough tomcats, young and half-grown are what we'll need. They make the best rat catchers."

Marine Asks $950 Damages For Slain Dog

The "humane" death by gas of a war dog, ordered by the Arlington Animal Welfare League, yesterday was the subject of a hot legal battle in Arlington County Court.

Sergt. Hinkle

Staff Sergt. Allen D. Hinkle, a marine hero of the Pacific and his pretty former - marine wife Elsie, charged the welfare league destroyed their dog without authority and against their will.

Judge Hugh Reid presided at the 2½-hour hearing of the bill of complaint in which the marine couple asked for $950 in damages as well as punitive action.

Was German Shepherd

Named as defendant was Mrs. Melvin W. Embury, 818 S Orme st., Arlington, charter member of the Arlington league.

The dog, a 4-month-old German shepherd, was formerly owned by the Marine Corps and given to Sergeant Hinkle.

Mrs. Embury told the court she had picked the dog up inside the Marine Corps reservation at Henderson Hall because it was "obviously ill." She said she had been called "many times" by people on the reservation to remove stray dogs and she assumed the dog in question was unwanted.

After she took it to the Arlington Animal Hospital, she said, she "exhausted every effort" to locate the owner. She was unable to do so, she said, and when Dr. Mose Parsons, a veterinarian at the animal hospital, told her the next day the dog was sick she ordered "the poor thing put to sleep."

Calls Dog Healthy

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Embury admitted she had checked "everywhere but Henderson Hall" where she picked the dog up to locate the owner.

Sergeant Hinkle told the court his dog was in excellent health and he had the permission of the commandant to keep the dog. He also said the league had no right to enter the reservation and the commanding officer had authorized him to tell the league to stay away in the future.

Mrs. Embury said the league was a volunteer organization run by private funds. Funds are so limited, she said, the league cannot afford to hospitalize sick dogs, so they are destroyed.

Judge Reid adjourned the court without a ruling declaring he would decide the case "in a few days."

Corporal Insists He Was Acting on Orders of Officers

Bad Nauheim, Germany, June 21 (AP).—A sixth defendant in the Lichfield cruelty trials was convicted and fined $60 today, while in a concurrent trial the prosecution charged that the detention camp in England commanded by Col. James A. Kilian was "worse than the dungeons of the dark ages."

A military court fined Corp. Louis L. Robson of Kansas City, Mo., $60 after he admitted striking prisoners at Lichfield. He insisted he was acting on orders from officers.

Private Fined $240

Robson, Kilian and Lieut. Leonard Ennis were tried simultaneously today by separate courts martial. A special court martial meanwhile sentenced Pfc. Joseph Defelice of Brooklyn, N. Y., to six months imprisonment and a $240 fine for showing disrespeect to an officer and breaking restrictions to quarters while waiting to testify against Robson and other Lichfield guards.

Opening the case against Kilan of Highland Park, Ill., Prosecutor Maj. Joseph Robinson of New York City, declared "we will show that prisoners were cruelly beaten, abused, kicked and clubbed upon Kilan's direct orders, with his knowledge, and in accord with a policy he himself inaugurated."

Not Rough Enough

Robinson charged that Kilan "even told guards that they weren't rought enough, that they'd have to get rougher."

Kilan's attorney had tried for four days to have the court quash the charges of aiding and authorizing cruel and unusual punishment.

Today the defense demanded that a secret War Department message be produced to prove its charge that Kilian could not get a fair trial here. The message could not be obtained immediately, however, because of its military classification as secret.

Nehru Arrest Leads Indians To Strike, Riot

New Delhi, June 21 (AP).—Crippling strikes and demonstrations protesting the arrest of Jawaharlal Nehru, president-elect of the All-India Congress Party, flared in major cities of India today.

Two British military trucks were burned in Calcutta, where American troops were restricted to camp as a "precautionary measure." Several persons were injured at Madura, in South India.

A dispatch from Srinagar, capital of the princely State of Kashmir, said Nehru had been released after his arrest there yesterday for entering the state against the decree of a district magistrate.

Car At His Disposal

Nehru is in a bungalow at Chinari, 80 miles from Srinagar, and all facilities and a state car have been placed at his disposal, the dispatch added.

The dispatch declared that Congress President Mavlana Abul Kalam Azad had advised Nehru to return to Delhi immediately, but Nehru declined to indicate his plans. The Kashmiri premier said the government had placed a plane at Nehru's disposal for the trip.

In indignation over his arrest, workers by the tens of thousands quit their jobs in Bombay, and all markets were closed in Calcutta, Karachi, and Madras. In Calcutta the transportation system was virtually paralyzed.

Appeal to Moslems

Nehru had gone to Kashmir in northern India to aid in the defense of Shiekh Abdullah and other persons accused of sedition in connection with a recent unsuccessful plot against Sir Hari Singh, Hindu Maharajah of Kashmir. The Congress Party working committee broke off its talks on a British plan for an interim government of India after Nehru's arrest.

Mahomed Oli Jinnah, president of the Moslem league, India's other major party, appealed to Moslems in Kashmir "not to be misled by slogans and stampeded into action which would gravely prejudice their cause." Ninety per cent of the population in Kashmir state are Moslems.

Alaskans Ask Planes to Go By Midwest

Minus mukluk and dog team, the Alaskans rode into Washington yesterday determined to tell the Federal Government to go mush.

They came by plane, on Alaska Airline's Starliner "Anchorage," the first commercial flight from the north country to an easter city. They were 22 strong, the Territory's leading citizens, and they meant business.

Headed by Governor Ernest Gruening, the delegation is here "to break the monopoly Seattle holds on all air and sea traffic moving West from the United States."

Voteless Lobby

"We have no congressmen in Washington, we have no vote in Alaska," Robert B. Atwood, president of the Alaska Statehood Association, explained at National Airport. "The people of the Northwest have the voice, vote and the business. We are a lobby."

Specifically, Dr. Gruening added, the purpose of the trip is to establish a direct air route linking the east, middle west and the far north country.

"There is no reason to fly to the Orient by way of Seattle, around Robin Hood's Barn," he said. "It is just as short, and a lot safer, to go by way of the middle west, over the Alcan Highway and Alaska."

Midwest Response Good

The trip of the 22 men and their pretty stewardess, who is the daughter of a north woods trapper, was originally planned to find support for their campaign in midwestern cities.

After leaving Anchorage last Sunday, the Alaskans flew to Fargo, N. Dak., Minneapolis and Chicago. The response in those cities, they said, was "wonderful." And so, after they had started back from Chicago, the idea came to them: "We'll do this whole hog. On to Washington!"

That's how they got here and why they came. The delegates themselves are footing the bill for the trip, sponsored by the Alaskan Chamber of Commerce.

Who are they? The majority of them, like the people they left behind, are stateside-born who went North, liked what they saw and decided to stay.

Traps From Plane

One of them is the pretty and robust stewardess, 26-year-old Mrs. Maxine Branham, of Anchorage, chief hostess for Alaskan Airlines. She was raised in the Swentna region, about 100 miles from nowhere, where her father is a trapper of beaver, mink and ermine. She remembers the day when mail was delivered once a year.

Times have changed since then, though, and like most of Alaska, the airplane has come to the Swentna. Her father does his trapping from a Piper Cub, makes flying visits to his daughter at Anchorage in no-time flat—and the mail comes in regularly.

Atwood, who left Worcester, Mass., 11 years ago, is now one of the leading publishers of Alaska. His Anchorage Times run eight pages daily and has a 7000 circulation. "But don't forget," he said, "We've just started a Sunday edition. And that's something."

Jewish Board Gets Wallet Made From Torah Scroll

The National Jewish Welfare Board headquarters in New York City this week received a wallet made from parchment from a Torah scroll desecrated by the Nazis.

Chaplain Bert Klein, who is serving with the U. S. Occupation Forces in Furstenfeldbruck, Germany, sent the wallet, which was recovered by a Jewish displaced person who found it in the possession of a German prisoner of war.

The pieces of parchment used in making the wallet contain the weekly portion from the Torah, entitled "Ki Teze" (Deuteronomy 22-26). This sets forth the Jewish code of behavior in time of war, rules governing the protection of widows, orphans and strangers and injunctions against immoral acts.

Children's Bureau Assailed And Defended at Hearing

Sharp disagreement over administration of the proposed Maternal and Child Welfare Act now being considered by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor was evidenced in a hearing held yesterday.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who spoke against the measure, called it a threat to the President's Reorganization Plan No. 2, and to the "hope for progress in our administrative machinery."

She charged the Children's Bureau with lagging far behind in its understanding of our Nation-wide responsibility to childhood.

Defended by Mrs. Cook

On the other hand, Mrs. Stanley G. Cook, legislative chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, declared the Children's Bureau has laid "a firm foundation for the performance of services to children," but declared this program must be expanded and funds increased. She urgently requested the Senate Committee to give favorable consideration to provisions of the act, to that end.

The act would provide for increased grants-in-aid for maternal and child health, crippled children and child welfare under the administration of the Children's Bureau.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), who served as chairman of the committee during yesterday's hearing, declared he will ask an amendment to the act declaring it to be congressional policy that terms of the measure should form a part of any national health program later authorized by Congress, and should be coordinated with and fitted into such program.

Praised by Russell

Praise for the proposed legislation also came from Russell Ballard, speaking as a representative of Hull House, in Chicago, who declared the measure "will contribute stabilization to the lives of dependent and neglected children."

While Mrs. Meyer charged the Children's Bureau, as an administrative agency, has always been a "fifth wheel," Ballard countered that since its formation the Children's Bureau had been "the only wheel" which on a Federal basis had been active in children's affairs.

Ballard strongly urged passage of the bill so that "neglected children anywhere can be corrected at local levels" with the integration of administration on upper governmental levels.

Miss Mary Leeper, executive secretary of the Association for Childhood Education, declared her association actively supports terms of the bill, and declared that for years the "Children's Bureau has fulfilled with courage, skill and very little money its obligations to society to safeguard the welfare of children."

Mrs. Eveline B. Jacobs, of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, also spoke in favor of the measure.

Mrs. Meyer stated that the Childrens B'ureau "has always had a disruptive and exasperating effect upon state governments, because it has no clearcut position and never can have a clearcut position in the Federal state and local machinery. It stands to reason that order demands the absorption of its administrative powers by agencies which have counterparts in the state and local governments."

Mrs. Meyer predicted that the bill if enacted "would potentially result in the creation under the Children's Bureau of a health division at least 15 times as big as the United States Health Service, which has a budget of only 100 million dollars for all its activities and it would set up a welfare division larger than that of the Social Security Agency . . . If the program collapses, it would set back the Nation's social progress for a generation."

The hearings will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief, and Dr. Martha Eliot, associate chief of the Children's Bureau, as well as seven other social welfare officials, will testify.

House Passes Bill To Admit Alien Sweethearts to U.S.

The House passed yesterday legislation to admit to the United States the alien sweethearts (true blue variety) of members of the armed forces.

The bill provides that aliens actually engaged to service personnel may enter the United States for three months as visitors, and must be deported if not married at the end of the three months.

Representative Klein (D., N. Y.) estimated that the bill would admit about 14,000 aliens, principally from Australia.

The House added two amendments to the Senate version. One would require that the American consul in the country from which the alien sweetheart comes be satisfied that a bona fide engagement exists. The other would require that a bond be posted to cover return transportation costs if the marriage does not take place.

The bill was returned to the Senate for concurrence in these amendments.

World Famine Council Elects Dr. Fitzgerald

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The new International Emergency Food Council elected an American, Dr. Dennis A. Fitzgerald, secretary general yesterday, amid acclaim of the nations present of this country's part in famine relief.

The acclaim came on the heels of a statement by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson that up until Monday this country had exported "more than 700,000 tons of wheat or equivalent" this month.

The statement, showing that in six days the Nation had exported for famine relief almost as much as the record 10-day shipments, from June 1 to June 10, indicated that the United States had at last hit its stride.

Informed sources stated that at the present rate, shipments this month will go beyond 1,250,000 tons—and may even provide enough to reach the commitments of 5,500,000 tons for the first six months of the year. The same source predicted that by July 10, this country may reach its hoped-for goal of 6 million tons of wheat or equivalent for famine relief.

Burn in Canada

Dr. Fitzgerald, who has been director of allocations and requirements of the Department of Agriculture, is a career man in the department. He is 43-years-old, Canadian born and was educated at the University of Saskatoon, Canada, Iowa State College, and Harvard University.

Chosen as chairman of the IEFC was Leonard A. H. Peters, delegate from the Netherlands, vice chairman is J. Charles Van Essche of Belgium.

The jobs are full-time appointments, and will last until December, 1948. The salaries, Dr. Fitzgerald said last night, have not yet been fixed. That, and the providing of quarters for the new organization, will be done by the Food and Agriculture Organization of United Nations.

Salaries, as in most international organizations under U. N. auspices, will be tax-exempt.

Pig Shortage Predicted

Earlier in the day the Agriculture Department, in a crop reporting estimate, predicted that little pigs will go to market in smaller numbers in the next 12 months than at any time in six years.

The 1946 pig herds will total about 81½ million head, the Department estimated—the smallest since 1940, and 6 per cent below 1945.

This reduction will be reflected in smaller supplies of pork during the late winter of 1946 and next spring and summer.

The department attributed the indicated sharp reduction to a shortage of livestock feed grains.

From Chicago the United Press reported that livestock shipments from farm to market dropped to the lowest level on record yesterday. Meat packers said that most of the Nation's families face meatless dinner tables for at least the next 10 days.

The reason, packing company officials said, was that farmers are withholding livestock in the hope that OPA price ceilings will be lifted June 30.

Christian Science Groups to Hear Evolution Talks

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" Services are held at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except Third Church, at 5 p. m. and Fifth Church and Society no evening service. All are invited to attend the services and the Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Bless the Lord, O my soul. O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty." "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches." (Ps. 104: 1,24.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them." (S. & H. 295: 5-8.) "The universe reflects and expresses the divine substance or Mind; therefore God is seen only in the spiritual and spiritual man, as the sun is seen in the ray of light which goes out from it." (S. & H. 300; 28-31.)

Mufti Quoted As Denying He Aided Axis

Cario, June 21 (AP).—The newspaper Akbar el Yom tonight quoted the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem as denying that he ever worked for a foreign country, and as saying that he came to Egypt for France because "it is the heart of the Arab movement and the seat of the Arab League."

The newspaper quoted him as saying:

"I don't hate the British, I don't hate the Americans. I don't even hate the Jews."

The British have accused the Mufti of broadcasting during the war for the Germans, and of aiding both Italy and Germany.

Last night Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha said that the spiritual leader of the Palestinian Arabs was expected to keep out of controversial political activities while enjoying Egyptian hospitality.

Today the Moslem Brotherhood, differing with that stand, demanded of King Farouk that the government give the mufti "all his rights and freedom to work as a great Islamic leader."

New Jap Diet Adjourned as Members Riot

Tokyo, June 21 (AP).—A rough and tumble session of the new Japanese Diet, whose members questioned whether their actions truly represented democracy, was adjourned in confusion tonight.

It was a hecklin, boisterous, scuffling affair almost from the start. Members swung at each other in the aisles. Spectators yelled in the galleries.

Unable to control the situation, Speaker Senzo Higai, target of the first outbreak, rang the adjournment bell.

The trouble started when Katsu Nomizo, social Democrat, ran to the rostrum to protest that the speaker was guilty of presiding unfairly. He accused him of making no effort to stop hecklers while another Social Democrat, Tetsu Katayama, was challenging the Liberal Cabinet.

Noisiest of the Liberal heckless was Shu Hara, who had been shouting "Baka" (idiot) at Katayama. He grabbed Nomizo and they tussled in the aisle. Other members joined in, some making wild swings at their compatriots as others tried to separate them.

"I am disgusted," called out Mrs. Chiyo Sakakibara, Social democrat. "That new democratic Diet should be respectable."

Katayama declared the government's belief in democracy must be clarified, and asserted the draft of the new constitution, which outlaws war, needed further revision.

In a statement to the Diet, General MacArthur urged that it give full consideration without political bias to the new constitution.

Cathedral to Give Choir Awards

The annual choir awards will be made at the Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 11 a. m. Presented by the dean, the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, the awards include the Janet Gover Medal for character; the Mount St. Alban Medal for general excellence in musicianship; and the Lane Johnston Medal for long and faithful service. The winners are selected by a committee including the cathedral organist and choirmaster, Paul Callaway. The service will be Litany and Ante-Communion. Dean Suter will preach.

At the 4 p. m. evensong the preacher will be the Rev. Merritt F. Williams, canon of the cathedral. The flag of the State of Missouri will be carried in procession at this and the morning service, and special prayers offered for the Governor and people of that State.

Other cathedral services tomorrow will be Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. Canon W. Curtis Draper, jr., will officiate at the later service.

Welfare Planning

Any planning for new welfare institutions in this socially backward Capital must be cause for congratulations. We have, therefore, only commendation for the energy and good work that Engineer Commissioner Young is putting into plans for "face-lifting" operations designed to cost more than 10 million dollars over a six-year period. The District has waited so long for modern welfare institutions that action must now be pressed forward with all reasonable dispatch.

Nevertheless, we think that a note of caution is justified. Having neglected this civic responsibility for so long, it is more than ever important that what is to be done now shall be right. Even while he was outlining the plans now taking shape, the Engineer Commissioner criticized the setup under which welfare policy is made. Welfare Director Huff's own office, he said, is "deficient in highly skilled and highly paid personnel." Commissioner Young thinks that Mr. Huff has not been persistent enough in pressing for improvement of his own organization. Is it wise to launch such an extensive program of institutional building with an admitted inadequate directing and planning staff?

This question assumes serious proportions because of the criticism frequently leveled at the proposed cluster of welfare intitutions near Laurel, Md. The chief complaint seems to be that institutions so far away from the city will work hardships upon both the patients and their families. This and other objections ought to be thoroughly aired. Before the program of improvements assumes final form, moreover, it is reasonable to expect that the findings of the welfare surveys now being conducted under the auspices of the Council of Social Agencies will be given thoughtful attention.

Case For Commutation

The conscience of this community has reason to feel relief over the stay of execution granted to Julius Fisher pending an appeal for executive clemency. Fisher was convicted a little more than two years ago of murder in the first degree as a result of the killing of Catherine Reardon in the library of the National Cathedral. It was a peculiarly brutal and shocking crime. But its atrociousness ought not to be allowed in any measure to diminish, in respect to this particular criminal, the safeguards which our judicial system has contrived to assure a meticulous administration of justice. Fisher was duly convicted by a jury in District Court. The conviction was upheld by the Court of Appeals. And a fortnight ago the Supreme Court affirmed the sentence of death imposed upon him.

But the Supreme Court divided in its decision on the case 4 to 3—an indication of itself that there is room for reasonable doubt as to the fulfillment of all the requirements of justice in the courts below. The question in Fisher's case is not whether he killed Miss Reardon but whether the killing was purposeful and "of deliberate and premeditated malice" as the District Code of Law defines first-degree murder. Miss Reardon had rebuked Fisher, calling him a "black nigger." He struck her with his hand impulsively in anger at this epithet and then, when she began to scream, struck her again with a stick and choked her into silence. She started to scream again, however, and he then stabbed her with a pocketknife. This does not sound like a crime indisputably embracing deliberation and premeditation.

As Mr. Justice Frankfurter observed in a dissent supported by Justices Murphy and Rutledge, this behavior "seems that of a man of primitive emotions reacting to the sudden stimulus of insult and proceeding from that point without purpose or design. Premediation implies purpose, and purpose is excluded by instantaneous action." It is Mr. Justice Frankfurter's view that the trial judge failed adequately to instruct the jury on the vital issue of premeditation or to focus its attention upon the alternative of a second-degree murder verdict. His seems to us an argument much more compelling than that of the Supreme Court majority which dwelt upon the policy of deferring to the District's courts on local law matters. No man ought to go to his death because of a regard for judicial etiquette.

Julius Fisher's execution can be averted now only by presidential action. We suggest no more than commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment. One need not go all the way with Justice Frankfurter's reasoning to hope that such a commutation will be ordered. It is established practice in the State of New York when the Court of Appeals there divides narrowly on a case involving capital punishment for the Governor to commute to a life sentence. The practice is a sound one. For when members of a court of last resort disagree, there is surely not that certainty which alone can justify society in exacting the supreme penalty. If an error must be risked, it is not amiss that it should be on the side of mercy.

Loan As A Club

To the House is now remitted the task of passing upon the financial agreement with Britain. We hope the agreement will be considered on the merits which were advanced so convincingly by the House committee when it recommended the credit by a 20-5 vote. Unfortunately an extraneous issue has arisen which is said to be persuading some pro-loan Congressmen to switch their position. These second thoughts reflect only a desire to rebuke Mr. Bevin for his unaccommodating speech of June 12 on the problem of Palestine. It is an unworthy desire to try to take it out on the British people for a puerile speech by their Foreign Minister. Aside from that, however, it attests a lack of sense of proportion. Two issues are not canceled out when one is used to club the other. On the contrary, they are made worse, and those Congressmen who are reviewing their vote on the credit bill in the light of the Bevin speech ought to bear this in mind.

The issue raised by Mr. Bevin's speech has been misrepresented in the Zionist messages with which Congress has been deluged. Mr. Bevin did not shut the door on any consideration of the entry of 100,000 Jews into Palestine. He said he would not agree to their admission immediately. As we have said before, the problem need not have arisen if the British government had accepted the recommendation of the Anglo-American Commission forthwith. But the present fact is that British and American delegates are now engaged in discussions on Palestine. In some congressional circles, aided and abetted by Zionist extremists, it is argued that the best way to put pressure on the British is to impoverish them by refusing the loan. Nothing could be more mistaken; no self-respecting nation responds to such crude tactics. What would happen in London if the House, in a fit of pique over the Bevin speech, were to refuse the credit, is that the London negotiations would be terminated. They would be terminated abruptly by a people outraged by an attempt at blackmail. The chances are that the British would then be thrown into the arms of the Arabs, and the issue over Palestine would widen and deepen, with the rift extending to British-American relations.

Our object in London is to try to persuade the British that any risks (which they have themselves increased by their own hesitation) entailed in carrying out the recommendation of the Anglo-American Commission are less than they think. The Palestine Commission was their idea, and the recommendation to admit the 100,000 Jews was made unanimously, by both British and American members. The American members at the time had reason to think that the British government approved the decision of its members. But the British, harassed by responsibilities greater than their power, seem to have taken fright. It is the job of our negotiators in London to recall them to their own pledges and to encourage them to take any risks there may be in living up to them. However, an adverse vote on the loan in the House, far from sustaining the hand of our delegates, would ruin it.

The general situation that would be created by an adverse vote on the loan deserves also to be pondered. The House would be biting off our nose to spite our face. In taking it out on the British people, Congressmen would be taking it out on America. The British would be left to fend for themselves. That is to say, they would retain and, in order to make ends meet, would have to intensify, all the trade and financial restrictions the abolition of which is the quid pro quo of this loan. The restrictions take the form of exclusive arrangements between Britain and other countries. Altogether they cover 50 per cent of the world's trade. Clearly there would be loss of trade and influence for the United States in any perpetuation and strengthening of this bloc. This would be the case throughout the Middle East, where all the Arab countries are members of the British bloc. It follows that an Arab slant in British policy would be fortified by our enforced maintenance of the British bloc.

The problem should be considered, however, as more than a dollars and cents problem. If Britain, for lack of the financial aid she requires in order to come into our world system, is left to go her own way, the world will lapse into a permanent condition of economic war, with three blocs of nations forever raiding each other for trade advantages. The House, we hope, will look at the financial agreement on its own merits, instead of on the demerits of Mr. Bevin's silly and thoughtless speech.

Klan Mentality

Gov. Ellis Arnall apparently is losing no bets in his drive to stamp out the Ku Klux Klan in Georgia. His campaign seems to be snowballing, and now he has enlisted the aid of the Rev. Grady B. Kent, a minister who got 62 lashes with a bull whip at the hands of the Klan in 1939 because of his views. All this is to the good. It serves to demonstrate the insidious root of the hooded wizardry and mystic mumbo jumbo that characterize the Klan in its outward aspects. If Governor Arnall is successful, as we hope he is, in destroying the legal basis for the Klan's existence, some of the old-time fear and awe inspired by the Klan's night riders and fiery cross also may be abolished. Though Governor Arnall's action can apply only to Georgia unless the Federal Government takes up the case, elimination of the Klan hierarchy in one State would be a severe deterrent to the Klan wherever else it meets.

It would be foolish, of course, to assume that the Ku Klux Klan can be eradicated merely by doing away with the name or technical organization. That might well serve merely to drive the Klan and its sheeted dragons underground. The real danger from the Klan lies not in its childish ritual, but in the kind of credulous mentality that permits it to survive and gain a foothold. Here is the incubating ground for the virus of fascism. It is this credulous attitude which leads one group of citizens to vent their animus for national ills they cannot solve on another group of citizens. The Klan parallels Hitler's line in making scapegoats of minority groups, such as Negroes, Jews, Catholics and foreigners. It thrives on ignorance and suspicion, and its chief weapons are physical intimidation and denial of citizenship rights such as the ballot.

As long as such attitudes exist in the United States there will be unscrupulous men to exploit them, whether they call themselves Klansmen, Silver Shirts or some other high-sounding name. Thus the only permanent answer to the problem raised by the Ku Klux Klan lies in attacking the conditions that give rise to the Klan mentality. These conditions can best be met by a continuous campaign of education not only to expose the shallow basis of the Klan's appeal but also to demonstrate repeatedly the elementary rules of good citizenship by which we can live peaceably and tolerantly together.

Polish Soldiers

Even a warm sympathy for General Bor and for the gallant Polish army on behalf of which he came to this country as a spokesman does not give us any relish for his proposal that exiled Polish troops be employed as American occupation forces in Europe. The idea has found some champions in Congress and out. Their hearts, we think, are ruling their heads. The employment of foreign mercenaries is odious to a democratic society. The employment of them to discharge the tasks of occupation which we have solemnly undertaken would be an outright disregard of our responsibilities. And from the point of view of the Poles, this would be a sorry end to their heroic odyssey.

Nevertheless we owe to the Polish soldiers who have fought courageously as our allies all the help we can give in finding a solution for their problem. There are some 200,000 of them for whom General Bor speaks —more than 100,000 under the command of General Anders in Italy who are, by general acclaim of the British and our own forces in that country, the best and most seasoned troops there today; about 20,000 in Germany; and the rest in England. They refuse to go back to Poland while the present government of that country is in power. Since they have been denounced as renegades and traitors, who can blame them?

The British government, which armed and equipped the Polish army, has now ordered it disbanded and has made provision for enrolling a number of its soldiers in a special resettlement corps in England. They will no doubt be a valuable addition to the English community. We should do well to welcome some of them here as an accretion to the fine body of Americans of Polish ancestry already in this country. Perhaps Alaska, that rich and still largely unexploited Territory of the United States, could profitably be opened up for colonization by these hardy soldiers. They would need help, of course, in getting settled; and the feasibility of the project would require careful study. We think, in any case, if they come to us here or in Alaska, they should come as so many of their countrymen came, with the intention of remaining and embracing American citizenship. They would be an asset, and Poland's loss would be America's gain.

Misunderstanding

The misunderstanding arising out of the telephonic interchange between former President Hoover and Assistant Secretary of State Clayton should be regarded as a closed episode by the public. For it is now apparent that Mr. Hoover, very wisely, did not intend to make public his views of pending price-control legislation. As he has indicated, the problems with which he is now dealing make it essential for him to remain aloof from legislative quarrels.

However, the opinions attributed to Mr. Hoover concerning the disastrous effects on the famine relief program of removing price ceilings from meat, livestock, and dairy products have been broadcast to the American public. And we feel sure that they reflect the considered opinions of every informed person. For it is obvious that if the prices of livestock and dairy products are permitted to rise uncontrolled, the feeding of livestock and poultry will become more profitable. As a result, more grain will be used for feed instead of being sold to the Government and exported to save the starving peoples of other countries. Moreover, the additional meat and dairy products thereby obtained will sustain only a small proportion of the people who could be kept alive on the same amount of grain converted into bread.

These are just plain facts that should be impressed day in and day out upon the minds and consciences of the American people. If we choose to fatten more cattle and hogs, millions will starve who might have been saved.

Democracy In The Army

Marshall Andrews, in his article of June 16, tells us that some citizens, unspecified, wish to "democratize" the Army, and goes on to "provide" his thesis that an Army with elected officers will not work.

Who are these people pushing such a plan? In four years of Army life I can't remember ever hearing anyone, even severest critics of the present system, advocate election of officers. Is it possible Mr. Andrews has made a straw man that he can demolish?

But since he seems seriously to question the feasibility of closer relations between officers and enlisted men, let us look at that. A little research into the present war might have revealed several cases where the caste system was modified without the disorganization he fears.

Officers and men of heavy bomber crews often preferred sticking together off duty, even when officers' clubs were available. There would have been more of this if the brass hats had allowed it. Contrary to Mr. Andrews' learned opinion, the men did not brawl over the officers' women in the bars.

In Colonel Carlson's Marine Raiders there was little social distinction, and the men were allowed to voice opinion if they had ideas on strategy. On duty there was no question who was boss, but off-duty relations were very informal. Yet the Raiders have been recognized as one of the most effective fighting units of the war.

British General Wingate's "Chindits," similar in organization to the Marine Raiders, also found that men in officers' clothing did not have a monopoly on brains. They too functioned as a unit, socially as well as "professionally."

Both Carlson and Wingate drew their ideas from the "gung ho" (roughly "comradeship") principle of the Chinese Communist armies. Reporters visiting the armies in northwest China brought back stories of an amazing closeness between leaders and men.

A fourth organization in which traditional methods did not work was the AAF Weather Service. Intelligent and educated by selection, individualistic by nature and training, these boys did not take to Army discipline. Under the usual methods they were invariably chronic troublemakers. But in a more informal arrangement with their own officers and noncoms their record of behavior compared favorably with any outfit in the army.

Perhaps Mr. Andrews should read his recent history!

Army Caste System

What better example of the caste system in the Army today could be brought to the public's attention than the results of the military trials at Lichfield?

To those who were not in service or to those against whom the complaints are directed, the caste system might seem to be the results of the "have nots" complaining about the situation of the "haves." To those who were enlisted men in the service, the caste system is real and vivid, bringing to mind many instances of unnecessary differentiation between officers and enlisted men.

The first duty of a soldier is to obey all orders given by a competent authority, regardless of what the soldier may think of the merit of such an order; to disobey would be to undermine the principles and theories under which modern armies operate. The sergeant recently tried in Lichfield obeyed the orders of his commanding officer, for which he was sentenced to imprisonment and a dishonorable discharge, while the officer who gave the order was given his freedom after a fine and an official rebuke.

Let those who say that justice is handed out fairly in the majority of cases in the Army look at a good example of this "imaginary" caste system—and wonder if maybe the enlisted men of this war could be correct in all their complaints.

'Campaign Veterans'

I should like to reply to Mr. John H. Beswick's letter of June 18.

Campaign veterans went overseas because they were ordered to do so. I stayed on this side because I was ordered to do so, and so did thousands of other noncampaign veterans. True enough, some men, by their own efforts, evaded hazardous duty. But this small minority is not important.

As for Mr. Beswick's definitions, I submit that a veteran should be a veteran, with no shadings or gradations. Either he is or he isn't. If Mr. Beswick must make a distinction, why not do a good job and make the new job policy applicable only to families of men killed in line of duty. Even then, there would be represented men who never got more than a few miles from their own homes and families.

Are we to be penalized for obeying orders? We are veterans, too.

Defense Organization

For the United States at the present time, the most suitable designation for a single department combining the Army, Navy and Air Forces would apparently be the War Department. To confine this title to the Army, or land forces, exclusively, was originally quite inappropriate, but, in making any change now, this mistake could be corrected.

On the other hand, the idea of naming the department for these three services combined as the department of common defense, as now proposed, does not seem to be a satisfactory solution of the problem. The idea, like the title, seems to have only a weak, pseudo-legalistic or rhetorical support in the fact that the preamble of the Constitution of the United States (1788) declares that one of the purposes thereof is to provide for the "common defense." "Common defense" is a term more properly applied governmentally to a league of independent States. Public, or national, defense is a more accurate term than common defense.

In respect to common defense, moreover, as a descriptive term, another defect, perhaps, is found in the ambiguity in respect to the possible necessity of attack, as well as defense. Exclusively defensive action may fall short of the needs of national safety, as well as possible future treaty obligation, as, e.g., a promise to protect the independence of a friendly nation.

To achieve these essential objectives the proper course is to put the Army, Navy, Air Forces, etc., in a single department, with coordinate rank therein, for the chief specific services now organized, as well as others which may be developed hereafter.

Russia's Atom Control Plan

The Russian atom proposal made by Adrei Gromyko is in no sense a plan that could outlaw atomic warfare .

According to the news reports, Gromyko proposes to leave "atomic development for peaceful purposes in the hands of individual nations." That is the same as saying: "leave atomic development for any purpose in the hands of individual nations." For without international control, including supervision and inspection inside every country, there is not the remotest assurance against the development of atomic power for war.

Without international atomic control there is no meaning in Gromyko's proposals. Let's examine them.

1. He says let's outlaw atomic warfare, but that's merely outlawing a weapon of war. The world went further than that with the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which outlawed not a single weapon of war, but war itself. Like Gromyko's proposals, however, this pact had no teeth in it.

2. He says let's punish violators of the agreement against producing or storing atomic weapons. But where is there a provision for finding out who and where the violators are?

3. He says let the United States destroy all her bombs. But where is his provision for determining whether the United States actually does destroy her bombs should she agree to do so? Surely he doesn't intend that a committee from an international body like the United Nations should do this, for that would be an international control, and Gromyko is not in favor of international control of atomic power.

The sole accomplishment of the Russian plan would be to remove the immediate threat against the world of an aggressive war by the United States using atomic bombs. This would appear to be a pretty small accomplishment in view of the likelihood of such a move by the United States, where there is as much war fervor as in a Quaker meeting.

The Baruch plan, on the other hand, would accomplish the above result, and in addition give a fairly sound guarantee against the future manufacture and use of atom bombs by an aggressor nation.

The choice of plans is an easy one—or would be were it not for the Russian veto.

J. M. MATHIAS.
Bethesda, Md.

After reading the Page 1 story in The Post of June 20, I was unable to touch my office work until I typed this letter of protest against the incredible insult of Andrei Gromyko—that the United States destroy its atomic bomb stockpile and cease further production.

This, coming after the Russians vetoed joint control of atomic energy development unless they retained the power to veto, is the most resounding slap in the face Uncle Sam as yet has received from his Communist former comrades.

There is, however, something very reassuring in Gromyko's latest mouthing of his Moscow orders: Russia understands what the atomic bomb might do to halt her march toward world domination and is now trying her biggest bluff in an attempt to get the United States to appease her further.

What the stupid head men in Moscow do not understand is that this latest insult and previous insults to the United States, which made it possible for her to stand up against Germany in Russia's darkest hour, is making "reactionaries," anti-Russians, out of Democrats and Socialists like myself.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

OPA's Support

IN SPITE of the never-ending stream of propaganda directed against it, the OPA still has considerable support. Bewitched, bewildered and beguiled as many people are by the barrage of hostile propaganda, still they recognize the danger if all barriers are swept aside.

That is why Congress in the end will probably strike out the amendments to the Price Control Act which would lift controls, 10 days from now, on most essential food. If those amendments were to go through then the housewife would see immediately what the effect of price control had been, and she and her husband would know whom to blame.

But even if these are knocked out, the booby-trap amendments, as Chester Bowles calls them, will be left in. Bowles says they can do as much harm as the direct-action amendments.

The point, however, is that the effect will not be felt until later. People have a way of forgetting after a few weeks have passed. They put the blame for their troubles not on the individuals responsible but vaguely on the Government, on Washington.

That is why the shrewd politicians in both House and Senate who have inserted the price-increases amendments on the slow-burn principle will probably insist on keeping them. Words like "decontrol" have a reasonable sound. The public will not understand what they actually do.

THAT, OF COURSE, makes the test for President Truman all the more tough. Bowles will recommend a veto if the booby-trap amendments are left in. But the choice before the President will be a painful one.

In fact, if a convention of witches had conspired to snarl up the whole business of price control, it could not have been more successfully snarled. To begin with, Congress, by delaying action until the last hour, made a sellers' strike almost inevitable. Just ordinary caution, if you were a manufacturer, would dictate holding off until you saw which way prices were going to move.

Then there was the unfortunate misunderstanding over the effort to obtain a no-strike pledge from the AFL and the CIO. That was first reported in terms of a clash between Bowles and the President, who was said to have turned it down. According to Bowles, this was not true, since it had been brought up at the White House merely in a tentative discussion stage.

That report did not enhance the chances of obtaining such a pledge from the two leading labor organizations. Those chances were tenuous at best. But if such a pledge were obtained on condition that the Price Control Act be renewed in more or less its present form, then the prospect of realistic controls would certainly be brighter.

No such pledge would be kept 100 per cent. This, Bowles frankly acknowledged. That kind of perfection simply is not possible in human affairs. Conceivably it would have been kept about as well as the no-strike pledge was kept during the war. The wartime record shows an infinitesimal number of days lost through strikes in comparison to the number of days worked.

FROM TIME to time angry readers wanted to know why I continued to plead the cause of Bowles and the OPA. The answer is that, in my opinion, Bowles is a reasonable man. He wants to do a reasonable job of controlling prices until the machine of American production gets into high gear. He speaks out with a kind of Yankee forthrightness in the face of too obvious shams.

This quality of reasonable need was evident in what may prove to be Bowles' last press conference as an official of the Truman Administration. He avoided flesh-creeping talk about runaway inflation and bushel-basket money.

Instead, he pitched his argument for continuation of realistic control on what a race between prices and wages would do to us as a people socially and politically. The damage done on the social-political side might be even greater, Bowles suggested, than the economic damage. It would exaggerate the argument over where the blame lay for our economic plight—whether with labor and the present Administration or with business and the Republicans.

That same danger, vastly accentuated, is part of the threat of a boom-to-bust cycle which would be precipitated by soaring prices. It divides us as a people along alien, class lines. It prevents us, as Bowles in his reasonable way pointed out, from getting down to our job. That job is to show the world we are a going concern providing rewards and satisfactions for almost everyone.

Supreme Court Feud

Why is it so bewildering that a contention exists between two Supreme Court justices? Why should they be different from preachers, Congressmen or any humans? They are just boys grown up.

There are more important things to occupy our time—the death of OPA, veterans having to live in cars, while all through the city one sees commercial buildings going up, seeds being sown for a next war because nobody trusts his neighbor. MRS. P. H. KAHLER.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Gromyko's Contribution

THE RUSSIAN proposals on atomic energy are very interesting in that they do not in principle contradict, and can be used in a most important way to supplement, our own proposals. They are addressed to the creation of a system of universal law in the field of atomic energy and all weapons of mass destruction.

LIPPMANN

The Acheson-Lilienthal report did not deal directly with this essential aspect of the problem, and Mr. Baruch's treatment of the veto was an attempt to supply the deficiency. Mr. Gromyko's proposals are another attempt, and in my view his approach is one which we have every reason to welcome.

HE IS proposing to make the production, the possession, and the use of atomic weapons "a serious crime against humanity", and to fix this crime not only by international agreement binding all states but also by national laws within each state. If this were done, then thereafter any person, private or official, who violated the law would be a criminal, subject to arrest and punishment, in his own country and in every other country.

Now our plan differs from the Russian in that we do not propose to abolish atomic weapons but to give the international authority the monopoly of such weapons. But this difference, which will have to be explored carefully, is less important than the agreement of the two plans. For in our plan it would be a serious crime for any government or any private person to produce, own, or use an atomic weapon. The Russians would make it a high crime for anyone to have atomic weapons, whereas we would make it a high crime for anyone but the authorized international authority to have them.

THE RUSSIANS stipulate that we should destroy all our atomic bombs three months after the agreement comes into force. Since it cannot come into force without our agreement (that is to say unless we do not veto it) the door is wide open to us to propose rules and regulations that should be embodied in the treaty and in the domestic legislation which Mr. Gromyko proposes in order to support the treaty.

While the proposal that we cease making atomic bombs and destroy those we have is one that we cannot accept offhand, we should not reject it in principle. From a strictly military point of view the Russian proposal is, I think, more favorable to the United States and less favorable to the Soviet Union than is the American proposal. For under the American plan the international authority would develop atomic energy plants outside the United States, and there is no doubt that, using American know-how, the international authority could build them sooner than any other country can hope to build them by itself.

THE RUSSIAN proposals would leave us with a monopoly for quite some time to come, and a great headstart for a much longer time, in the facilities necessary to make atomic weapons. For my own part I do not believe that the Russians have really understood the problem of atomic energy well enough to realize how much they are conceding to us and how little they are getting for themselves. When they do, they will shut the loud mouths of the Daily Worker and their other foolish friends, and take a very different view of the extraordinarily radical proposal which Mr. Baruch has made to them.

For the situation in atomic energy today is as if the United States had the only steel plants in the world. With that steel are made the only guns in the world. Along come the Russians and say: "Destroy the guns you have, cease making new guns, but keep your steel plants, and keep the dies, jigs, blueprints, machine tools, and whatever else it takes to make guns out of steel. We Russians, on the other hand, having neither guns nor steel plants, expect some day to have steeel plants as good as yours." We, on the other hand, have said that, if we can agree on a plan for it, we will not only stop making guns for ourselves but will participate in building steel plants as good as our own in other parts of the world.

THE OBJECTION to the Russian plan is not that it would deprive us of a winning weapon of war. It leaves us with all the means of making these weapons, and this immense military potential would continue to be a great element in the balance of power in the world. The objection is that while it still leaves us preeminent in atomic power, it offers no guaranty, and not even a plan, against national rivalry in the development of destructive atomic power.

For the Russians do not seem to have understood the fundamental conclusion of the American scientists—that any country which has the facilities for making atomic energy in large quantities has practically all the facilities for waging atomic war. Unless all the important development of atomic energy is firmly under international control, the threat of atomic war will be imminent and persistent.

THE MORE we examine the Baruch and the Gromyko statements the more we have reason to feel, I believe, that this is as promising a start as we had any right to expect. That is, in fact, an understatement. For the two plans open many doors. They shut no doors. And they make all the room a statesman could ask, at the beginning of a great enterprise, for negotiation, persuasion, explanation, invention, and accommodation.

McMahon Bill

By Ernest Lindley

House Tinkering Is Unfortunate

IN ITS treatment of the McMahon bill to control atomic energy, the House Military Affairs Committee appears to be more military-minded than either the War or Navy Departments.

Lindley

The McMahon bill, in its original form, bore the earmarks of draftsmen who had phobias about the military. Under the leadership of some of the atomic scientists, an issue was made of military versus civilian control of atomic energy. Thus stated, it was a false issue. The May-Johnson bill, to which these scientists objected strenuously, did not prescribe military control. It permitted the appointment of military and naval officers to various positions, including the administrator and deputy administrator. It also contained strong provisions for safeguarding atomic information of military value.

The original McMahon bill went much farther in the other direction. It could properly be called a bill to exclude the military altogether from association with atomic energy. It also made entirely inadequate provisions for safeguarding the secrecy of valuable information.

BUT THESE serious defects in the McMahon bill were overcome before it was reported out by the Special Senate Committee on Atomic Energy. The atomic energy commission of five and its key employes are t obe civilians. But liaison with the Army and Navy is provided for; and suitable security clauses have been inserted. The War and Navy Departments said they were satisfied. The bill sent to the House had the unanimous indorsement of the Special Senate Committee on Atomic Energy and not a vote was cast against it on the floor of the Senate.

Very good arguments can be made for tying the armed forces a little closer to the atomic energy commission. The appointment of military men to one or two of the five places on the commission would not mean military control; nor would the designation of a military man to be head of the commission's division on military applications of atomic energy. These are decisions which might well be left to the discretion of the President. They are decisions which should be affected not only by the personal qualifications of the men available but by the international situation.

The United States has already presented a plan for the international control of atomic energy. Whether favorable consideration of this plan in other countries would be encouraged or discouraged by the presence of one or two military men on our national commission to control atomic energy is an open question. The effect might be nil.

As, or if, an international control system substantially like that proposed by the United States goes into effect, our national control system will be modified accordingly. This is stipulated in the McMahon bill as well as in Bernard M. Baruch's presentation to the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

WE DO NOT know whether Russia will agree to an effective system of international control. Nor do we know what, if anything except to collect all the information they can lay their hands on, the Russians are doing about atomic energy within their own country. The possibility must be faced that lack of Russian cooperation will compel the United States to continue to pay serious attention to atomic energy as a weapon. In that event, the military and our national atomic energy commission may have to be interlocked more closely than the McMahon plan contemplates.

As it passed the Senate, however, the McMahon bill provides for the essential minimum of liaison between the atomic energy commission and the military. It is the product of extended public discussion and debate. Secretary of War Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal have both indorsed it. Mr. Patterson has testified that it is superior in certain important respects to the earlier May-Johnson bill drafted at the War Department.

The sensible course for the House is to take the bill unanimously passed by the Senate. A national policy on atomic energy was needed last fall when Mr. Truman asked for prompt action. It would be especially unfortunate if tinkering with the bill by the Military Affairs Committee should cause further delay.

Russia And The Atom

By Barnet Nover

Mr. Gromyko's Proposal

ALTHOUGH the Gromyko plan, like the Baruch plan, emphasizes the imperative need of international action to control atomic energy, any other resemblance between them is purely coincidental.

NOVER

In substance and spirit the two plans are about as far apart as the poles. This may be because while we put all our cards face up on the table, the Russians, being horse traders from away back, are asking for far more than they hope to get while offering far less than they are really prepared to give.

We can only hope that this is the case and that in due course the Russian attitude will be substantially modified.

Yet as matters stand now, the gulf between the Russian and American views on this all-important matter of atomic energy control is so wide and deep as to make it dubious whether any reasonable compromise between the two plans is possible.

THIS IS NOT merely because the abolition of the great power veto, insofar as it relates to atomic energy control, is central in the American scheme, while its retention is the very cornerstone of the Russian plan.

This difference of opinion regarding the veto is merely the symptom of a basic difference in the attitude and approach of the two nations toward this problem.

The heart of the Baruch plan is the atomic development authority that he, following the suggestion of the authors of the Acheson-Lilienthal report, would set up and which would possess supra-national rights with respect to the ownership, management and control and inspection of atomic raw materials and plants. It would be given sole and exclusive rights to conduct research in the field of atomic explosives, and its agents would have the full right of unlimited inspection.

Nothing resembling such a proposal is to be found in the Russian plan. To be sure, the rules for the development of atomic energy would be laid down by international agreement. But the execution of those rules would be left to the individual nations and the entire scheme would operate under the aegis of the Security Council of the United Nations with its rules of procedure —including the great power veto —unmodified in any particular.

IT HAS BEEN argued with great force and cogency that in insisting on the abolition of the veto in the atomic charter Mr. Baruch is pinning his hopes on a phantom.

"The problem of what to do with a great power which violates a sovereign agreement was thoroughly considered in drafting the Charter," points out Mr. Walter Lippmann. "The conclusion of those who studied the problem was the same as that reached by the authors of the American Constitution: that no great and sovereign power will sign an agreement saying that the other nations may make war against it, and yet that no agreement can prevent them from waging war against it if they think they must and believe they can."

So far as it goes, this point is well taken. But it does not go far enough. The fact is that the veto applies to much more than the prevention of the punishment of a treaty violator when one of the five great powers decides against punishment.

The veto, as the experience of the Security Council has demonstrated, can be used and has been used as an instrument of delay, obstruction and obfuscation.

It is for this reason that it must be eliminated at least with respect to anything involving the control of atomic energy.

THE RUSSIAN plan consists of two parts. The first is a treaty outlawing the atomic bomb. Under it the signatories would also be pledged to destroy all atomic bombs in their possession within three months after that treaty had gone into force. And they would each promise, within six months of that development, to "pass legislation providing severe punishment for the violation of the terms of this agreement."

Such a treaty would have about as much value as the Briand-Kellogg Pact which it so greatly resembles.

Furthermore, atomic energy development would be carried out not by a supra-national body, as is provided for in the Baruch plan, but by the individual nations. To be sure, the Russian scheme provides for the establishment of two committees to go into a host of special questions connected with the problem of atomic energy development, among them measures to forbid the production of atomic bombs, "measures, systems and organization of control in the use of atomic energy" and "the elaboration of a system of sanctions for application against the unlawful use of atomic energy."

But all these things would be discussed and acted upon after the outlawry convention had been approved, and the discussions and agreements would follow the rules of the Security Council. This means that Russia, or any other great power, could use its veto power to blackmail the others into accepting its own point of view.

The Russian plan cannot for one moment be seriously considered. It asks for everything and offers nothing.

A GROUP of Cabineteers and White House advisers were gathered at the home of Undersecretary of the Navy John Sullivan the other day, comparing notes as to who was going to see the Louis-Conn fight in New York.

It turned out that the following were going, and all taking the same airplane to New York: Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton A. Anderson, OPA Administrator Paul Porter, War Reconverter John Steelman, Charles Ross, White House Personal Secretary Matt Connelly.

"What a chance for the pilot to pull the plug!" wise-cracked former Congressman Joe Casey of Massachusetts, now vice president of TWA.

"Yes," shot back OPA's Paul Porter, "and become another Colin Kelly!"

Race Tracks vs. Vet Housing

BIGGEST scandal in the veterans' housing program is the way nonessential race tracks, roller coasters and bowling alleys divert thousands of feet of precious lumber and carpenters' time, which could be used on homes for veterans.

Among the new or refurbished race tracks are those at Atlantic City and Monmouth, N. J., with the Arlington, Ill., track also attempting to wangle some new reconstruction, and quite a battle raging over the Tanforan track near San Francisco.

The fight over rebuilding Tanforan is an illustration of how energetic race track owners and sleepy-eyed CPA officials cooperate to give veterans' housing the go-by.

On April 26, a San Francisco contractor filed a complaint with CPA (Civilian Production Administration) that the Tanforan race track was getting carpenters by advertising overtime and, as a result, his veterans' housing projects were at a standstill.

CPA, however, ruled that Tanforan was merely demolishing former Navy construction, which it ruled was permissible. About this time, however, Tanforan applied for a new construction permit, and, according to Guy Standifer, president of the track, he was encouraged to go ahead by Ed Halloran, regional CPA construction manager.

Halloran denies this, but Standifer testifies that Halloran was very sympathetic and virtually told him to go ahead with the work pending action on the permit.

Gambling Joint Gets Lumber

MEANWHILE, this columnist, on June 2, publicly called attention to the reconstruction of Tanforan and asked CPA Administrator Jack Small why he was permitting it. Next day, June 3, Gilbert Kneiss, District CPA construction manager, claimed that the Tanforan application had been denied on the previous Friday, May 31.

This illustrates one inside reason why CPA lets race tracks, bowling alleys, and roller coasters get built, while veterans' housing is sidetracked. Kneiss, who wanted to stop the Tanforan reconstruction, is an engineer and former district manager of the War Production Board. Halloran, his boss, who wanted the race track built, is a contractor. Contractors usually are sympathetic to the desires of other contractors, and many of the CPA local committees are from the building industry.

However, three days after public comment by this commentator and after CPA allegedly issued its denial of a permit, a CPA inspector found that Tanforan was continuing work on stables, grandstand, clubhouse, and paddock to the tune of about $132,000. CPA immediately sent a second order and all work has now stopped.

Furthermore, it was found that excess lumber obtained by dismantling temporary war buildings at the race track went to build an we gambling house at Lake Tahoe, Nev., owned in part by E. W. Heple, Tanforan's contractor. The Tanforan people claimed all this lumber went to veterans, but this was not true. Actually, part of it went to the gambling joint in direct violation of a CPA order.

This is just one illustration of how and why the boys who lived in foxholes are still looking for homes.

Note 1.—CPA officials say that veterans' housing is also handicapped in part by some Federal judges who don't cooperate in helping to enforce CPA regulations, among them Judges Adolphus St. Sure, Michael Roche, and Martin Welsh in northern California. In contrast, Judge Louis Goodman, in San Francisco, gives vigorous cooperation in enforcing CPA construction permits.

Note 2.—One race track which went out of its way to cooperate with the Veterans' Housing Program is the Southern California Jockey Club. Its president, A. J. Uniack, released all his building material, ordered many months before, to veterans.

We Did Not Defeat Japan

MOST PEOPLE won't believe it, but Czechoslovakia, a country not unfriendly to the USA, the people have no idea that the United States had anything to do with defeating Japan. They think it was Russia that did it all.

Reasons is that the Russian radio and propaganda machine has done a skillful job of propagandizing the Czechoslovak people, while we have done absolutely nothing to counteract it.

Reason we haven't told our side of the story is that Congress has hamstrung the State Department on short-wave broadcasting. Led by that great statesman from Grosse Point, Mich., Representative Louis Rabaut, the House Appropriations Committee cut the heart out of the State Department's appropriation for propaganda, especially radio broadcasting.

The other day, however, the appropriation bill came before the Senate in a secret hearing. And, believe it or not, the man who knifed his friend, Secretary of State Byrnes, in the back on this appropriation was none other than the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Tom Connally of Texas.

"An idiotic waste of money," shouted the gentleman from Texas, "devised only by someone who does not understand world affairs."

A few days later, the gentleman from Texas sailed for Paris, with his friend Mr. Byrnes, to try to offset Russian propaganda and diplomacy in Europe.

"How," remarked one State Department official who had listened to Connally, "can you fight something with nothing? The Russians are fast turning the people of Czechoslovakia, Romania, Finland, even France and Belgium, against us. Czechoslovakia was founded in the United States with the help of Woodrow Wilson. But we are fast losing that basic friendship because we do nothing to counteract Russian propaganda."

Note—Should the Senate OK Byrnes' appropriation bill while he is in Paris, it would greatly strengthen his hand at the international conference table.

CORRECTION

The Merry-Go-Round of June 20 as published in The Post read "Today (September, 1944)," states the British Intelligence report, "they (the Chetniks) are to be found almost everywhere fighting pro-Allied at heart." The sentence should have read "Today (September, 1944)," states the British Intelligence report, "they (the Chetniks) are to be found almost everywhere fighting alongside German and satellite troops, but they still profess to be pro-Allied at heart."

CIO Row Marks House Efforts To Set Up Election Probe Unit

By the Associated Press

A new row over the CIO broke out yesterday among House Democrats, with Speaker Rayburn himself in the midst of the battle.

The immediate issue in the current controversy is who shall be the chairman and members of a special committee being set up to investigate this year's congressional elections.

But the basic point of dispute is the degree and manner in which the group may look into activities of the CIO's Political Action Committee. This depends largely, of course, on the ones chosen to do the investigating.

Southern Democrats in control of the House Rules Committee started the fur flying when they met in closed session and approved a resolution by Representative Domengeaux (D., La.) authorizing creation of the campaign investigating group.

Southerners Favor Domengeaux

The Southerners—frequently at odds with Rayburn and the Administration—did this despite the Texas Speaker's indorsement of a similar measure by Representative O'Neal (D., Ky.).

By precedent the author of the resolution finally adopted by the House is chosen chairman of the committee.

The Southerners said they picked Domengeaux because they knew he would "go after" the CIO and thoroughly examine election activities of the Political Action Committee.

Some of them told newsmen privately they thought O'Neal's approach to the question would be different, because of a heavy CIO votong bloc in his home district.

These comments irked the speaker, and when a radio commentator (Fulton Lewis) referred to O'Neal as a "CIO man" it provoked Rayburn into the highly unusual action, for him, of issuing a statement.

Rayburn Praises O'Neal

In the statement, handed newshen late Thursday, the Speaker praised O'Neal highly and said "I wanted him for chairman . . . because he is fair, a man of outstanding ability and possesses a judicial temperament."

Rayburn still is in the driver's seat about the committee chairman and its members, because he picks them.

The matter probably will not be decided for another week or two, following final action by the House on the legislation.

Senate Silver Bloc Wins Rise Of 18.2 Cents Per Ounce

By the Associated Press

Senators from Western silver producing States won a quick victory in the Senate yesterday when the annual Treasury-Post-office appropriation bill passed with their silver clause attached.

Under this, the Treasury is allowed to sell surplus silver for domestic manufacturing at 90.3 an ounce as against a present price of 71.11. After two years the price would go to $1.29 or the monetary value of silver.

Although a stiff Senate floor battle had been forecast, the rider and the entire $1,606,067,840 appropriation slipped through in less than 10 minutes without a dissenting vote.

Off the floor, Senators privately explained that the battle over silver prices will be fought out in the Senate-House committee named to write the final version of the bill.

The appropriation measure had been held up in the Senate since February by the dispute over silver prices. Senators from the East, where silver is used for jewelry and other manufacturing, had promised the floor battle but less than a dozen Senators were present as the bill was rushed through with no protests raised.

The House had approved continuation for two years of the 71.11 cent rate an ounce for silver sales.

The bill now must go back to the House for consideration of net Senate increases of about $1,800,000, in addition to the silver item.

The Senate voted $325,614,500 to operate the Treasury for the 12 months that start July 1 on $119,000 more than the House. It voted $1,280,453,340 for the Post-office Department, or $1,391,990 more than the House.

Bible Predicts World War III, Adventist Says

Prediction of a third World War is contained in a chapter of Revelations, the Rev. F. L. Robbins told the Columbia Union Conference, Seventh-Day Adventists, last night.

More than 2000 persons attending the sessions at Takoma Park, Md., heard Elder Robbins declare that "world conditions point unmistakably toward a third World War." His text was Rev. 11:18, 19.

"And the Nations were angry and Thy wrath is come."

Newspapers and radios, he said, "are providing a running, day-by-day fulfillment of this Biblical prediction. They are openly presenting the prospects for a third World War before the treaties have been signed ocially bringing to a close World War II.

World conditions—"frenzied" according to Elder Robbins—are seen in his interpretations of Revelations 12:12—"the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." Elder Robbins is president of the Columbia Union.

Delegates from Washington, Maryland and Virginia are attending the annual camp meeting.

Four new church organizations were admitted to the sisterhood of churches comprising the Potomac Conference—Pulaski, Waynesboro, Strasburg and Appomattox, all having been established during the Conference biennium now closing.

Output of Autos Rises in Week

Detroit, June 21 (AP).—Passenger car and truck production in the United States and Canada this week was estimated by Ward's Automotive Reports today at 53,930 units compared with a revised figure of 50,206 for last week.

The total compares with 133,565 units assembled in the comparable week of 1941, last prewar year of car production.

ICC Examiner Reports On Florida East Coast

Control of the Florida East Coast Railway by the St. Joe Paper Co., which is owned by the duPont estate, was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by ICC Examiner Ralph H. Jewell.

Jewell's recommendation was the result of hearings here and in Florida on this question:

Should the reorganized railroad be operated independently under control of the St. Joe Co. or be unified with and operated by the Atlantic Coast Line?

In the New York bond market a few Florida East Coast 5s sold at 80, up 1. Atlantic Coast Line 4½s traded at 114, up ¾, on small turnover.

About 45 countries import United States made floor and wall tiles.

Brookland Church To Hold School

Between the dates of June 24 to July 5, from 9 a. m. until noon weekday mornings, the annual Vacation Bible School sponsored by the Brookland Baptist Church will be held in the church building, 16th and Monroe sts. ne., and will provide Bible study, handwork, expressional activities, recreation and inspiration for boys and girls between the ages of 4 to 16.

The pastor, Dr. Gaye L. McGlothlen, will serve as principal, and Wilmer Bennett as assistant principal. The department superintendents are: Mrs. O. P. Mast, beginners; Mrs. S. C. Worsley, primary; Mrs. E. H. Willis, juniors, and Mrs. Gaye McGlothlen, intermediates. They will be assisted by a staff of 40 volunteer workers.

The Gallup Poll

Britons and Americans Size Up Russia's Motives Differently

By George Gallup

Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 21.—The British and American people have markedly different ideas as to Russia's motives in world affairs.

In Britain the majority with opinions on the subject think Russia is concerned only with securing herself against attack. In the United Statese, the majority of people think Russia is out to achieve world domination.

The contrasting attitudes are shown in the results of public opinion polls taken in the two countries. In Britain the British Institute of Public Opinion, which has been conducting opinion surveys for approximately 10 years, put the following issue to a vote:

Poll In Britain

Some people say that Russia's foreign policy is concerned with making certain of their security, others say that it imperialist expansion. Which do you think?

The vote:

Security	42%
Imperialist expansion	26
No opinion	32

The views of the American people, as sounded in a survey reported last month, contrast with Britain's as follows:

POLL IN U. S. A.

As you hear and read about Russia these days, do you believe Russia is trying to build herself up to be the ruling power of the world, or is Russia just building up protection against being attacked in another war?

The vote:

Ruling power	58%
Protection	29
No opinion	13

In short, the percentage of people who think Russia has imperialistic designs is more than twice as great in the United States as in England, the respective figures being 58 per cent in the United States and only 26 per cent in England.

Even though the British seem to have less fear than we of Russia's motives, the majority of British voters do not want to see the party in control of their government take too cordial an attitude toward the Communist Party in England.

Recently the British Communist Party applied to England's ruling party, the Labor Party, for affiliation. While the decision was still pending, British voters were polled by the British Institute as follows:

The Communist Party has applied for affiliation with the Labor Party. Do you think that the Labor Party should or should not agree?

The vote:

Should	18%
Should not	54
No opinion	30

Last week officials of the Labor Party announced that the communist request for affiliation had been turned down.

French Favor Taking Ruhr From Germany

The political separation of the Ruhr from Germany, opposed by both the British and Americans, is favored by French public opinion by the overwhelming ratio of 5-to-1.

This vote, revealed in a poll by the Gallup Poll of France, dramatically demonstrates the strength of French sentiment against a revivified Germany, for separating the heavily industralized Ruhr from Germany would be roughly comparable to separating the Detroit-Pittsburgh-Cleveland industrial area in this country from American control.

The vote in France:

Which of these solutions to the Rhur problem do you prefer?

A. Separate the Ruhr from the rest of Germany and put it under international political and economic control	71%
B. Keep the Ruhr under the authority of the central German government, but place its industries under international economic control?	14
No opinion	15

A similar poll in Britain by the British Institute found that fewer than half (44 per cent) had followed discussion of the issue, but among this group the weight of opinion also favored taking the Ruhr away from Germany.

Court Rules Ball Club Must Pay Released GI

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

That was an interesting item from Mexico City, the one about Mr. Sam Breadon, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, calling upon Senor Jorge Pasquel, president of the Mexican Baseball League, for a friendly visit. Into it can be read the first sign of appeasement toward Mexico's aggressor tactics in the realm of baseball.

POVICH

It was a bit startling, I thought, to read that Mr. Breadon was in Mexico for a friendly call on the Pasquels. They are the Mexican gentlemen who last month crossed the border and raided Mr. Breadon's team, grabbing off three of his most valuable ball players—Pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin, and Infielder Lou Klein. Breadon lost $200,000 worth of ball players to Pasquel and his agents.

But now we find Breadon in Mexico, visiting card in hand and watching ball games with the Pasquels as if they had done him no injury. He even had a nice word for Mexican baseball, complimenting the Pasquels on "building up the game in Mexico in so few years' time." Ordinarily you don't go calling on folks who have just relieved you of $200,000 worth of assets unless you are in a mood to get very tough about it, but Breadon was there in a strangely dispassionate spirit.

The explanation is that Breadon is a very practical man, apparently content to absorb his losses and reach some kind of an understanding with the Mexicans that might prevent further raids. It's the first departure from organized baseball's high-and-mighty attitude toward the Mexicans and inasmuch as Breadon is vice president of the National League, his visit may have significance.

If Breadon's mission is to make peace with the Mexicans, it is in contrast to the position taken by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler in Havana last winter when he declared that there was no hope of dealing with the Pasquels. Chandler declared at that time that "we won't have any dealings with the kind of men who try to wreck our rosters. If Mexico wants organized baseball, we'll deal with reliable people in that country."

Clark Griffith refused emphatically to meet with Bernardo Pasquel in Havana, running from the invitation as if from a plague. "I want nothing to do with those people," he said. "They'll have to come to us if they want to talk." Apparently Breadon doesn't feel the same way about it.

Breadon has long been a practical man. He has sold more and better ball players than any other club owner in history, and if any owner is to treat with the Mexicans Breadon recommends himself. Not on the basis of join-'em-if-you-can't-beat-'em, but simply to arrive at some understanding whereby Breadon's Cardinals might be safe from future raids. The Pasquels are still supposed to be dickering for Stan Musial, Breadon's prize outfielder.

Breadon's concern is understandable enough. If his club loses the pennant to Brooklyn this year, it will be because the Mexicans persuaded Max Lanier to jump Breadon's team. Lanier had a lifetime record of success against the Dodgers that was amazing and the chances are that if he were still with the Cardinals that club would now be leading the league.

The Cardinals' owner, at least, is not laughing off the Mexican threat. That's what the other club owners tried to do, until they discovered how close they were to losing such stars as Phil Rizzuto and Ted Williams. The Yankees and the Dodgers sued the Mexicans to restrain them from luring players away, but Breadon is taking the more direct method of appeasement.

It is during the next winter that the organized baseball club owners will have their big worry. The Pasquels are building two more parks in Mexico to seat 50,000 fans, and they warn that they aren't through making offers to American stars. The players know now that is is easy to communicate with the Pasquels and the off-season will probably see dozens of them slinking across the border for salary discussions with the Mexicans.

American owners will be forced to insert larger figures in the player contracts if they want to keep their stars happy. By this time it is substantiated that there is big money to be made in Mexico. The player who gets a salary cut or isn't offered a raise commensurate with his ideas of his worth will be ripe to be plucked by the Pasquels.

At first the players were skeptical of the Mexican offers. Only the more daring, like Mickey Owen, jumped. But the money in Mexico seems to be holding out legitimately enough and if organized baseball in America isn't worried at this point, it ought to be. Mr. Breadon apparently is.

Bob Hope Interested

Cleveland Club Expected To Change Hands Today

Cleveland, June 21 (AP).—The decks were all clear tonight for a financial transaction which could transfer the Cleveland Indians to new ownership faster than Bob Feller can flick a fireball over the plate.

Tomorrow may be the day. Present directors of the club are scheduled to meet about noon.

Bob (I'm in for one-sixth) Hope, between planes at Little Rock, Ark., today declared "whadda ya mean, is the deal definite? They've got my money. Of course it's definite. Sent the check yesterday."

Hope said "word came from my attorney in Cleveland is that the deal already has gone through, although there are a few loose ends to be tied up" in tomorrow's meeting of directors.

But Bill Veeck, jr., in whose name a syndicate made the offer for the Tribe, lock, stock and barrel, was less definite.

"Bob's check is here," said he. "So is mine. So is all the money. But as yet there has been no word from the present owners."

The Hope's local attorney, J. J. Klein, would say merely that it was his understanding the deal probably would be cleaned up tomorrow.

Veeck continued to use the word "if" in speaking of the pending deal, but said "any minute the present owners say 'We'll go,' our side would say 'Here's your money,' and right then we would be in charge of the club."

All the legal formalities have been repared and all the papers drawn, said the former owner of the Milwaukee Brewers.

"The minute they put all the stock certificates on the table, they get their money and the club changes hands," he said.

Hope wouldn't say how much money he was putting up, but said his part of the purchase would be "about one-sixth of the club." He would not confirm a figure of $175,000, nor would he deny it. His plans are to be a "silent partner," because he is too busy to take an active part, said the former Clevelander.

From his hotel room, where he is still nursing a leg injured while he was a Marine, Veeck disclosed that his own stock holding would be as large as any other single holding in the syndicate, but that a limitation has been set up so no one individual would have personal control. He did not elaborate.

From the present owners came silence. President Alva Bradley already has said that if the rest of the present owners sell, so would he and his family. Late yesterday probate court approved the granting of a tax waiver on shares held by the late Charles L. Bradley, showing inheritance tax had been paid.

Dykes May Manage Club

Detroit, June 21 (AP).—Jimmy Dykes, former manager of the Chicago White Sox, watched the New York Yankee-Detroit Tiger game from the press box today and lent further emphasis to the rumors that he might be named manager of the Cleveland Indians should that club change hands.

Dykes worked with Harry Grabiner, one of the reported buyers of the Indians and former vice president and secretary of the White Sox, at Chicago and said "another connection with Grabiner wouldn't be bad at all."

Badger Chief Gloomy on Eve Of Crew Races

Seattle, June 21 (AP).—Coach Allen Walz, the man on the spot, put his favored Wisconsin Badgers through the paces today as he wound up training for tomorrow's international eight-oared collegiate regatta on scenic Lake Washington.

"I'm afraid we've lost whatever advantages we might have had," Walz gloomed after a morning workout today. "Our kids are tired from that trip out here. They didn't get much sleep and they didn't eat well. And they're not used to the shell. I'm not kicking, because it was a matter of the draw for shells, but out boat is 11 years old."

Then, looking out toward the lake, he said:

"Now there's a real crew for you. Those are the boys who can take this thing. Look at 'em row!"

Falz was referring to Stork Sanford's Cornell oarsmen who were just concluding their workout. Despite rather choppy water, Sanford expressed himself as quite pleased with their showing.

Six of the eight crews in tomorrow's race took to the water this morning. All were slated for workouts in the afternoon. Darkhorse Rutgers and Washington kept their shells racked during the morning.

Shellhouse experts generally were picking the redshirted Wisconsin Badgers in tomorrow's 2000-meter race, mainly on their undefeated record for the year. And those who followed them over the lake today were impressed with their size and ability.

Rutgers, which has a time trial of "under 6:10" and Massachusetts Institute of Technology are two other crews which have caught the eyes of kibitzers. And the experts join Walz in singing Cornell's praises.

Tomorrow will be the first race for three crews—California, Washington and University of British Columbia.

Joseph to Return To Midget Races

Mike Joseph, Philadelphia's popular Ford V-8 pilot who barely escaped serious injury twice last Tuesday, will return for action Tuesday night on the midget automobile racing card at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway.

George Fonder, Charley Miller and Johnny Ringer are other top contestants who have enrolled.

Joseph has his first close call on the second lap at the far turn in the first semifinal when Carl Miller's machine struck his car a glancing blow after Mike's Ford had spun completely around.

The finishing touches, so far as Joseph was concerned, were applied on the seventeenth lap of the feature when he crashed into the top rail in the backstretch at a time he was leading the field.

Jug McSpaden, Nelson Lead Toledo Field

Toledo, Ohio, June 21 (AP).—The team of Byron Nelson of Toledo and Harold McSpaden held on to a two-point lead today at the finish of the third round of the Inverness Invitational Golf Tournament.

Nelson and McSpaden gave Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., a five-hole beating in the afternoon round for a plus total of 13 points.

Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., the first da yleaders, whipped Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Vic Ghezzi of Knoxville, Tenn., 5 up, and had a point total of 11.

Hogan and Demaret again combined for a best ball score of 63 to match their performance of yesterday.

Defending champions Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., and Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles, whipped Bob Hamilton and Dick Metz of Chicago, one up.

Toney Penna of Cincinnati and Herman Barron of White Plains, N. J., licked Sam Byrd of Birmingham, Mich., and E. J. Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., two up.

Collins Ordered to Hearing Tuesdy In Bertelli Suit

New York, June 21 (AP).—Federal Judge John S. Knox late to-Joseph M. (Ted) Collins, owner of the Boston Yanks in the National Football League, to show cause why he should not be permanently restrained from "willfull" inducing Angelo Bertelli, former Notre Dame star, from playing on his team.

Hearing to determine whether to make the order permanent was set for next Tuesday.

The complaint was filed by the Los Angeles Club of the All-America conference, which claims Bertelli signed a contract last February 21 with that club for the 1946 and 1947 seasons.

The California club, which asks damages in an unnamed amount, also charges that on May 22 Collins "wilfully and maliciously induced Bertelli to enter into an agreement with the Boston" club.

On June 5 the Los Angeles Club was granted a temporary order restraining Bertelli from playing with the Yanks. At that time Collins said that Bertelli, drafted by the Boston Club during the war, would be kept by the Boston Club as a non-player if the courts held against the Yank contract. Bertelli's home is at Springfield, Mass.

Weatherly Plans To Fight Transfer

Detroit, June 21 (AP).—Outfielder Roy Weatherly, released to Indianapolis of the American Association by the New York Yankees this week, appeared here today as the Yanks arrived for a series and said he was en route to Chicago to confer with American League President William Harridge regarding his case.

Weatherly contends he is a 10-year man and should get an outright reseale. He joined the Cleveland club in 1936 and played part of that season as well as 1937 with New Orleans.

Roanoke Pilot May Get Another Hearing

Lynchburg, Va., June 21 (AP).—Piedmont League President Richard A. Carrington said today his office had tried previously to straighten out the troubles of Eddie Popowski, suspended manager of the Roanoke Red Sox, and probably would arrange another conference with him before the Roanoke manager is reinstated.

Carrington suspended Popowski for seven days as a result of a Popowski popoff which resulted in Eddie being tossed out of the game at Newport News Tuesday night. A Newport News runner was called safe at first and Popowski took issue with Umpire Balda's decision.

Tigers Eye Va. Hurler

Berryville, Va., June 21.—Bobby Houghton, former ace pitcher of the Berryville High School, and hurler for the U. S. Marines and Duke Unviersity, has written his parents here that he si being given a tryout by the Detroit Tigers. Houghton stated that he was flown from North Carolina to Detroit by an official of the Tigers.

O'Toole Turns Heat On Ring Head Eagan

By Bus Ham

That Irishman from Brooklyn, Representative Donald L. O'Toole, turned his punches toward Eddie Eagen today in pressing for an investigation of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn bout.

O'Toole made a brief speech on the floor of the House in which he reiterated that he was filing a $100,000 suit against Promoter Mike Jacobs, complaining that the promoter accused him of extortion. Jacobs claims that O'Toole's office phoned for complimentary tickets, which were refused.

O'Toole then turned his attention to Tagan. In a 500-word extension of his remarks for publication in the Congressional Record, O'Toole asserted that it is Eagan's duty as New York State Boxing Commission chairman to conduct an investigation of the World Heavyweight title bout.

About the time O'Toole was expanding his campaign, the Justice Department took itself out of the Capital's fistic front lines in a hurry. It denied a published story that it would look into both boxing and baseball for antitrust violations.

No Investigation Planned

"The department absolutely is making no such investigation and no investigation has been planned," a Justice Department official said. "There is no reason for an investigation. We have had no complaints and we are not interested in any controversy between Promoter Mike Jacobs and Representative O'Toole."

In extending his remarks, O'Toole, who complained yesterday that the heavyweight title bout was a "national fraud arnd scandal," said of Eagan:

"Eddie Eagan is a nice boy but nice boys are just snickered at by men like Uncle Mike (Jacobs).

"It is still not too late for Commissioner Eagan and his men to investigate not only the fight itself but the entire industry in New York and wipe out the . . . element that are ruining this competitive sport.

"Mr. Eagan, there is your duty. Have you the gumption to do it?"

While reiterating previous criticisms of Jacobs and Eagan, O'Toole said:

"Jacobs was not alone responsible. New York State Boxing Commission, which is the representative of the people, had a deep obligation to prevent any such waltz contest as took place."

Should Have Tune-ups

O'Toole declared that Eagan should have insisted that both fighters participate in warm-up bouts to the public could judge their skill after being in the armed forces for years; that the training preparations should have been carefully studied.

"But the worst feature of the actions of the commission," O'Toole said, "was to sit themselves at the ringside and allow this fight to continue after the ,rst two rounds.

"Had they stopped the fight, they would have done boxing the greatest service possible."

O'Toole said he has received no reply from Eagan to a telegram sent yesterday demanding an investigation.

Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, who had a ringside seat at the fight, said upon his return to his office today that he was "very disappointed" in the bout but sees no need of a boxing czar.

He commented, however, that "every section of the united States should have an opportunity to see good, first-class fights . . . in this way we would develop better fighters and we would have better championship matches."

This reference apparently was to recurrent criticism such as those made by O'Toole that Jacobs has a "monopoly" on the top-flight fighters.

The Grays will rely tomorrow on their newcomer, Frank (Groundhog) Thompson and Gene Smith, for pitching, while Barney Brown, southpaw ,and Henry McHenry, right-handers, will get the call for the Stars.

Elbro's McFadden Knew All Along

Winchester, Va., June 21.—George (Elbows) McFadden, lightweight bare-knuckle king of the world just before the turn of the century, still knows a champ when he sees one.

Prior to leaving for New York to witness the big fight this week, "Elbows" left a sealed envelope with friends to be opened after the bout.

In it McFadden had predicted that Louis would win by a knockout in the eighth round and that Eddie Joseps would be the referee.

Dodgers Get Mobile's Hard-Hitting Catcher

Mobile, Ala., June 21 (AP).—President Edgar Allen of the Mobile Bears announced today that Bruce Edwards, hard-hitting Bear catcher, had been traded to the Brooklyn Dodgers in a deal that will bring Mobile five players.

Edwards, a stocky receiver with a .330 batting average, left last night to join the Dodgers.

The Bears will get right-handed Pitcher Frank Iago, from Montreal, and an additional catcher, pitcher and outfielder plus Roland Marquardt, a righthanded pitcher who was optioned here recently from Montreal.

The Bears and Dodgers have a working agreement.

Al Niemic Of Seattle Wins Test

Seattle, June 21 (AP).—Federal Judge Lloyd L. Black ruled today that Al Niemiec, former second baseman for the Seattle Rainiers, is entitled to have his contract reinstated in that position. Niemiec petitioned for reinstatement following his return from the Navy.

"The ball club need not play, but must pay, the petitioner," the court added.

Judge Black decreed Niemiec is entitled to compensation since discharge from the service, less credit for what he has received in other employment. Niemiec has signed with the Providence (R. I.) Cranston club of the New England League, he testified at a court hearing last Saturday. He was released by the Seattle club this spring.

Reasons on Monday

Judge Black announced he would give his reasons for his ruling next Monday afternoon.

Niemiec, former second baseman for the Rainiers at $720 a month, is entitled to compensation for the entire season, less what he has received in other employment, Judge Black said. He has been playing for the Providence-Cranston Club for $150 a month.

The decision affects all baseball clubs, since organized baseball generally has not adhered to Section 8 of the Selective Service Act, which says that a veteran is entitled to his old job for at least a year. Most baseball teams guaranteed veterans only a 30-day trial.

Rules Against Club

"Under the evidence in this case, and in the light of the law, as I understand it," Judge Black commented, "Niemiec's unconditional release by the baseball club April 21 of this year was not a discharge for cause as recognized by the statute."

The Rainier Club of the Pacific Coast League opposed the reinstatement on the ground that Niemiec had slowed down.

Former Manager Bill Skiff testified for the ball club that Niemiec was released because at 36, he no longer had the speed and ability to stick with a Coast league team.

Atlantic City Invites Jacobs, $100 Tickets

New York, June 21 (INS).—Promoter Mike Jacobs went blithely ahead today with plans for Joe Louis-Tami Mauriello heavyweight championship fight in the fall or winter. Mut he nearly collapsed when advised that he had been invited to hold it at Atlantic City and again charge $100 for ringside seats.

Mayor Joseph Altman announced in Atlantic City that he had written Jacobs asking for a title fight at his resort city's convention hall and suggesting that the price scale be from $100 to $25.

Mike said he would "await arrival of the letter with interest," when told that convention hall will seat 40,000 and hold $2,750,000 worth of customers.

But he kept a deep silence about the suggested $100 top.

The $100 ringside charge at the Louis-Billy Conn bout Wednesday night has Mike in enough trouble already.

Most of the sniping at Uncle Mike came from Representative O'Toole, of New York, who charged that Jacobs held a boxing monoply, reiterated today that the Louis-Conn bout was a "fraud" and said that such activities "are taking boxing not into the gutter but into the sewer."

Miss Osborne, Miss Betz Win

London, June 21 (AP).—The No. 1 and No. 2 players of the winning United States Wightman Cup team, Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, reached the final round of women's singles in the London grass courts tennis tournament today.

They won over their teammates, Miss Betz by 6—1, 6—3 over her doubles partner, Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., and Miss Osburne by 7—9, 6—4, 7—5 over Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif. Miss Brough held the No. 3 singles spot on the cup team.

The men's singles final-round bracket was filled when Dinny Pails of Australia, top-seeded his countryman, Geoff Brown, 6—4, 6—4. Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador, advanced through the withdrawal of Jack Kramer of Los Angeles because of a blister on his hand.

Miss Dettweiler Sets Course Mark

Miss Helen Dettweiler, formerly one of the best women golfers in the District area, blazed across the Columbia Country Club turf yesterday with a subpar 72 to set a ladies' course record.

Miss Dettweiler clipped three strokes o the old record of 75, set by Elinor Finckel, and four off the ladies' par, which is 76. She went out in 36, and duplicated that feat on the in nine.

In a "match par" tournament, Miss Jerry Weible won with an 84 to win Class A honors, while Mrs. Hugh MacKincie took the Class B play seven down to par.

Illinois Star Easily Takes NCAA Event

Minneapolis, Minn., June 21 (AP).—Herb McKenley, Illinois' world record breaking quarter-miler, easily won his qualifying heat in the 440-yard event of the National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field meet today in the creditable time of 47.5 seconds.

McKenley, who three weeks ago was clocked in :46.2 around one turn, galloped the complete lap at Memorial Stadium only four-tenths of a second behind the American record for two turns of :47.1 set by Ben Eastman of Stanford in 1932.

The Jamaica born speedster won his heat by 15 yards over teammate Marce Gonzales.

In the other qualifying section, Dave Bolden of Southern University won in :49.3. Carl Ockert of Illinois, runner-up to McKenley in his world record-breaking race, faded badly in this heat and failed to qualify.

Qualifies 2 Finalists

Southern California, expected to battle it out with Illinois for team laurels in the two-day meet, matched the Illini in qualifying two 440 finalists—Wells De Loach, fourth in McKinley's heat, and John Wachtler, who tied Art Harnden of Texas A & M for second in the No. 2 test.

Lloyd La Beach of Wisconsin, like McKenley a native of Kingston, Jamaica, led the eight 100-yard qualifiers with a time of :09.6, equalling the stadium record established by Barney Ewell of Penn State in 1940. The other heat winner was Bill Mathias of Illinois in :09.8. In Mathias' heat was another Trojan qualifier, Mel Patton, who was third behind Texas University's Allan Lawler.

Harrison Dillard of Baldwin Wallace, cofavorite with Ralph Tate of Oklahoma A. and M., had the best qualifying time in the 120-yard high hurdles, winning his heat by 7 yards over Tate in :14.2. Defending Champion George Walker of Illinois placed fourth, just qualifying, in the other high timber heat which was won by Tom Mitchell of Indiana in :14.5.

Southern Cal Goes Ahead

Southern California moved ahead of Illinois in the qualifying race as Wilbur Thompson paced the seven shotput qualifiers with a toss of 52 feet 7 inches. Favored Bill Bangert of Purdue was second with 51 feet 3¼ inches. Illinois was not entered in this event, nor in the javelin throw, broad jump or discus.

A comparatively slow time of 1:55 by Oscar Browne of Lincoln University topped the eight 880 qualifiers. Favored Bob Behberg of Illinois, with a season's best time of 1:52.3, placed third in Browne's best heat. Al Meeker of Colgate won the other half-mile heat in 1:55.3.

The seven javelin qualifiers were headed by Bob Likins, behemoth San Jose star who hurled the spear 198 feet 10½ inches.

Newhouser Wins 100th Game, Beating Yanks for Tigers, 6-2

Detroit, June 21 (AP).—With four New York errors making his task simple, Hal Newhouser achieved his twelfth pitching triumph of the year and the 100th of his seven-year big league career today as the Detroit Tigers pasted the Yankees, 6 to 2.

Newhouser, who struck out 10 men, had a two-hit shutout until the ninth, when Charley Keller doubled and Joe DiMaggio lined his thirteenth homer into the right center field seats 400 feet from the plate.

Hal's four-hit pitching looked considerably better than the six-hit job turned in by three Yankee flippers, however, as New York miscues led to four unearned Detroit runs.

Starting Pitcher Joe Page threw the ball into right field trying to catch Dick Wakefield off first in the second inning and Dick raced all the way to third, from where he scored on Hank Greenberk's long fly.

Third Baseman Bill Johnson bobbled Walter (Hoot) Evers' grounder leading off the fourth and singles by Wakefield and Jim Outlaw helped the Tigers to two more unearned runs.

Three straight passes by Page filled the bases in the sixth and Outlaw singled across two more runs and went to second when the ball got away from Keller.

Randy Gumpert stopped that spree with the aid of a double play but Allen Gettel, who pitched the ninth, was the victim of the fourth Yankee miscue. Evers doubled, moved to third when Phil Rizzuto muffed Outlaw's grounder and scored on Jimmy Bloodworth's hit to right.

Relief Job Beats Giants, 5-4, for Cubs

New York, June 21 (AP).—Relief Pitcher Paul Erickson throttled the New York Giants on four hits and one run over the final 6 1/3 innings today to register his third straight victory as the Chicago Cubs came from behind to defeat the Giants, 5-4.

Erickson rescued Starter Johnny Schmitz in the third inning after the southpaw was touched for a three-run homer by Johnny Mize and a single by Walker Cooper. The big right-hander then retired the side and didn't allow another hit until the sixth inning.

Chicago picked up two counters in the fourth on a two-run circuit blast by Phil Cavarretta and clinched th contest with three runs in the sixth.

Boy Larkmead Wins at Charles Town

Pays $4.60; Exploit 2d on Heavy Track

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 21.—Second in four of his five races this year, W. B. Casilear's Boy Larkmead finally found conditions to his liking and won the Glen Dearing purse, feature of the Friday program.

With Jockey Johnny Tammaro, a Baltimore boy, in the saddle, the 8-year-old son of Sting and Glen Sprite bounced to the finish line 5 lengths in advance of the Flamingo Farms' Exploit. E. B. Lee's Battletown was third in the field of six.

Boy Larkmead, operating over a heavy, holding track, was clocked in 1:24 1-5. A crowd of 6500 installed the veteran gelding as the favorite and his backers were satisfied with a $4.60 mutuel The sun shone most of the afternoon and there was promise of a good racing slip for the Saturday program. z

BattletownRallies

Boy Larkmead went to the front at once and could not be dislodged. Exploit made repeated efforts to get leader but was tiring at the end. Battletown rallied mildly.

Tammaro also had a hand in the $110.40 daily double. He was aboard J. H. Morris' Setting Trick, a $21.60 shot in the first race. J. W. Etheridge's He'll Try was the winner of the second event at a $14.80 mutuel, while under the handling of George Cusimano, a Washington boy.

Jockey E. Carrillo escaped with a shaking up when his mount, Leo Seay's Anne Del, fell in the third race. This test was won by E. A. Dipola's Morbrook under the riding of Jockey Skeets Holland. The plater paid $8.20.

Stymie Tops Favorites for Brooklyn 'Cap

New York, June 21 (AP).—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Stymie, W. L. Brann's Gallorette and the lightly-weighted Let's Dance from the Sunshine Stable were rated favorites today for tomorrow's running of the Brooklyn Handicap at Aqueduct.

A field of eight, one of the smallest ever named for this historic mile and a quarter test for 3-year-olds and up, will face the barrier in the race for $50,000 added in prize money.

In the early line, Stymie, top weight at 128 pounds, was rated a likely odds-on favorite at 7-10, with Gallorette, in at 10 pounds less, a 3-1 shot. Probable odds on Let's Dance, assigned only 108, were quoted at 5-2.

The other starters, survivors from a list of 52 eligibles when nominations closed last April 15, will be W. G. Loew's Helioptic and Stage Bond, owned by Harry Salomon, both expected to go to the post at about 4-1; William Helis' Pindus, E. R. Bradley's Burning Dream and E. M. Johnson's Ekyad.

Last Scores Upset Win at Aqueduct In Hurdles 'Cap

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 21 (AP).—For the third time in its nine runnings, a horse representing Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark was victorious in the $5000 added Cagliostro Hurdles Handicap when a 4-year-old jumper named Last belied his name and scored an upset in the stake here today.

Although close up on occasions, Last never had won a race through the field. In today's test of about a mile and three quarters, he led all the way and beat Mrs. D. B. Stephens' rank outsider, Farsight, by a length and a half to pay $17.80. Mrs. E. D. Weir's Binder was third, another length and a half behind.

Veteran Jockey Melvin Morlan was unseated by topweighted Fair Crystal at the fifth of the 10 hurdles and was removed to a hospital where it was reported he had a possible fracture of the right arm and contusions of the chest.

Pirate 'Purchaser' Denies Rumors

Chicago, June 21 (INS).—Oscar Salengier, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers in the American Association, today flatly denied a report that he heads a syndicate which is prepared to pay $1,400,000 for the purchase of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Salenger said: "Naturally, I'm interested in baseball. But that's as far as it goes. It takes about 10 times what you pay for an American Association Club to buy a major league franchise, and I'm afraid I don't have the money.

"Furthermore, I don't know anything about any syndicate."

Judy Aterbury Wins College Girls Tourney

Chestnut Hill, Mass., June 21 (U.P.).—Mis Judy Atterbury of Wellesley College defeated Miss Jean Rockey of Duke University 6-4, 6-2, today to win the national Collegt Girls Tennis tournament on the Lonkwood Cricket Club courts.

In the Massachusetts Women's Singles Tourney, Miss Katharine Hubbell of Dedham defeated Miss Rockey by a score of 6-3, 6-3.

Va. Amateur Golf Tourney To Draw 75

Richmond, Va., June 21 (AP).—Approximately 75 boy golfers from 26 clubs throughout the State are expected to participate in the Virginia amateur golf championship tournament to be played here Tuesday.

Robert A. Wilson, chairman of the event sponsored by the Virginia Junior Chamber of Commerce, listed the clubs as follows:

James River Country Club, Newport News (Lewis Hamilton, Mac Tyler, John MacDonald, Charles Tyman and Charles Allen, alternate).

Princess Anne Country Club, Virginia Beach (George Darden, jr., Tommy Kernan, Roderich Watson and R. McGrath.)

Portsmouth Golf Club, Portsmouth (Arnold Tarkelsen; Robert Tureman and Bobby Pond.)

Hampton Country Club, Hampton (Floyd Bruce and Edwin Holloway.)

Farmington Country Club, Charlottesville (Richard Wells.)

Ingleside Hotel and Country Club, Staunton (Elwood Tutwiler, Glenn Flavin, Paul Bowen and Richard Clatterbaugh.)

Lakeside Country Club, Richmond (Hartman Hobson.)

Preliminary matches will be held Monday and regular play is scheduled to start Tuesday morning. The winner and three runnersup will represent Virginia at the National Junior Amateur Golf tournament at Indian Canyon golf course, Spokane, Wash., August 5-10.

Golf Entries Close Monday

Entries for the Public Links Golf championship, to be held at Baltimore, July 10, will close on Monday. The three Washington public courses, Anacostia, Rock Creek and Potomac Park are accepting entries.

'Cloak and Dagger' Tops Story Schedule Of New Film Company

UNITED STATES PICTURES has set itself an initial 1946-47 production schedule calling for six major releases.

The first of these, now in the final stages of filming, will be of particular interest to Washington, in view of Joseph Bernhard and Willim cmfwypp cmfwypp vbgkqjjj schdfluu rluu Milton Sperling, executive heads of the new producing company. It will be "Cloak and Dagger," dramatic story of the wartime acivities of the OSS, costarring Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer and Robert Alda, under the direction of Fritz Lang.

Teresa Wright

"Pursued," an original screen play by Niven Busch, which will star Teresa Wright, is due to go into work July 15.

Following in order will come "So Goes the Nation," based on an original story by Clarence Greene and Russel Crouse; "Distant Drums," a picturization of Dan Toheroh's play of the Old West, in which Pauline Lord and Beulah Bondi appeared at the old Belasco Theater here years ago "Golden City," a drama of modern American life by Ted Allan, and "Gentle Sin," a comedy drama by Dana Burnet and Francis Spencer.

Since Joseph Bernhard is a former member of the Warner Brothers high command, United States Picttures will release its product through that company for exhibition at the Earle, Metropolitan and Ambassador theaters.

As a new form of attack on that bottleneck, the Earle, by the way, has hit upon the device of opening its new attractions whenever that seems best, without regard to any fixed day of the week. This, it is felt, will greatly expedite the movement of the backlog of films gathering dust. It is also why "The Bride Wore Boots," costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Cummings, will be breaking out on 13th st. Monday morning, instead of next Thursday. In other words, picturese at the Earle henceforth will run as long as theye pay their way at the boxoffice and no longer.

The Cuddle Up, newest thrill ride out at Glen Echo Park, is now in full operation, if that's still news. Installation was held up by the steel strike and Managing Director Leonard Schloss was forced to open his popular resort up the river in Maryland without it. This is the first Cuddle Up ever set up in the Washington area, although it is reported most popular of all the thrillers in other parts of the country.

Gets Brass Ring!

Bidding fair to match the monumental record of "Oklahoma," the Theater Guild's earllier musical hit "Carousel" will celebrate its 500th performance at the Majestic Theater, New York, with next Thursday's matinee.

This second of the Richard Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, smashes was the recipient of the only award made by the New York Drama Critics Circle in its last voting. Having been one of the last to see it, we are at this point one of its most enthusiastic boosters.

By next Thursday afternoon "Carousel" will have played to 837,964 seated customers and 15,060 standees. According to Treasurer Jack Pearl, the till of the Majestic will have clinked to the tune of $3,134,212 since opening night, April 19, 1945. That's quite a dab of clinking.

A couple years from now I plan to go up and see it again!

Reflecting the eagerness of show business to cooperate in any charitable enterprise, President A. Julian Brylawski of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of D. C., makes known that both midcity and neighborhood picture houses will conduct an intensive fund-raising campagin, beginning today and continuing through next Saturday, in behalf of the D. C. Famine Emergency Relief Committee, Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, chairman. The theaters will have special lobby booths and containers for contributions. The local committee urges that Washingtonians contribute money instead of canned foods, which, unless in concentrated form, have been found impractical in the alleviation of suffering abroad. Contributions may be made at the Earle and Metropolitan and all Warner Brothers residential theaters; Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia; RKO-Keith's, Trans-Lux, all Koged and Burka houses and the Circle Theater.

Dots and Dashes

"Harvest," starring Fernandel, and "Hatred," with Harry Baur, looked upon as two classics of the French cinema, will constitute the double bill of revivals opening today at the Hippodrome Theater. . . . Anybody remember when "Hatred" was ever before presented in Washington? . . . I don't. . . . Erika Thimey, choreographer and director of the Dance Theater, will audition dancers experienced in modern and ballet, tomorrow afternon at 2, at 2012 P. st. nw. Two openings exist in a projected series of ensemble productions. Only applicants planning to remain in town this summer eligible. . . . Stage Pictorial, valuable magazine of the theater, will publish only two issues during the summer—will revert to monthly schedule in September. . . . The Ballet Theater, foremost American dance group and first to be invited to appear abroad since the war, sailed Thursday for England aboard the Queen Mary, 55 strong. . . . Elaine Adams, Madeline Raven, Tod Collins, Orville French, Delin Dudd, James Eberly, Elsie Turner, Louis Mintz and Mary Flaten are announced as the cast of the Jarvis Repertory Theater's "Enchanted April," to run July 1-13.

HOLLYWOOD, June 21.—Alan Ladd's next will be "The Great Gatsby," based on the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel. The picture was made 20 years ago with Warner Baxter and Lois Wilson in the leads, but it was ahead of its time and didn't do so well. . . . Howard Hughes, according to his right-hand man, Harry Gold, will film "Here I Was Born," the new novel by Clayton Bright. The story is about a wealthy fellow, who snubbed the small town in which he was born, until he returned in later years and tried to make friends. Then the town brushed him off. . . . Clark Gable and David Niven have been inseparable since the tragic death of David's wife. In only six weeks she earned the love of every one who met her here. She had perfect manners. David will live with the Doug Fairbanks. Joan Crawford also offered the hospitality of her home. . . . Peggy Wood, down from Yucca Loma in the desert for one day, signed to play Ginger Rogers' mother in "Magnificent Doll."

Clark Gable

Business and More Business

Joel McCrea and Harry Sherman take off for location ahead of the "Ramrod" company. Joel's looking over some Nevada property. . . . Lindley Armstrong Jones, otherwise known as "Spike," ends his tour at the New York Strand at $12,500 per week. Not bad for a guy who beats a washboard the wrong way. . . . George Murphy, Kay Kyser, Rudy Vallee, and Cliff Henderson are interested in the pan-Pacific auditorium. They'll either tear it down and rebuild or make additions to the tune of 2½ million dollars. . . . Bob Graham was running a 16-mm. film of "In Old Chicago" at Fanny Brice's house. When he came to the fire scene the whole reel went up in blazes. Fanny said, "After this I'll stick to comedy. It's cheaper." . . . Susan Douglas, who looks very much like Janet Gaynor in the old days, goes into "Bel Ami." She used to be a page at M-G-M's New York office and a member of the Johnny Desmond show. . . . Betty Hutton and husband on a three-week vacation in Chicago and New York. . . . Bumped into Deanna Durbin at Adrian's ordering a stack of clothes.

Tale of a Dark Victory

Remember the picture, "Here Comes Mr. Jordan?" Well, 'twas a smash hit, got Academy Awards, and I've heard people say, "Why can't we have more films as good as it is?" Would you like to know how that one finally got on the screen after five years' struggle? Here's the story. It was written by Harry Segall with the title "Heaven Can Wait." Columbia hired him as a writer, and picked up his yarn for $2500. It was read, discussed, and tossed from one scripter to another. Finally Lewis Milestone got hold of it and was going to produce it as a play with Jed Harris. But the two had what we playfully call a misunderstanding. It was never done. Then Everett Riskin signed with Columbia. The script was handed to him and he fell in love with it. He wanted Cary Grant for the lead, but Grant read the story and said, "The public will never accept me in a fantasy." A statement somewhat prophetic after "Once Upon a Time."

But Riskin, come hail or come high water, was still determined to do the story. By that time Jed Harris was asking $27,500 for it. And Harry Cohn finally paid the price. Then came the real struggle to get Harry to read the story. He finally did—all the way through and acted out all the parts at a studio luncheon. Everybody was jubilant until Harry said, "Nope, can't put it on the screen. It's fantasy." But by this time Riskin had his dander up. He gave the script to Bob Montgomery, who was sold on doing it immediately. But Bob had to be borrowed from M-G-M. Arrangements were finally made. Then Cary Grant decided he'd like to do the picture after all. But it was too late. A struggle to get a director followed. Columbia finally got the picture finished. Every critic at the preview went overboard with praise. So everybody got a lot of credit—except Harry Segall, the little man who wrote the story.

Handin—Goldberg

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Handin, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., announce the enagement of their daughter, Rosalynd, to Leopold Goldberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Goldberg, Washington.

Miss Handin attended Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, Pa., and is a member of Tau Beta Sigma. Mr. Goldberg, a member of Alpha Zeta Alpha.

Younger Set Dines and Dances As Wozencrafts Honor Debs

A DINNER last night at the Army and Navy Country Club, followed by dancing on the roof, was a highlight of the week's calendar for members of the younget set.

Hosts were Col. and Mrs. Frank W. Wozencraft and honor guests were Miss Ann Muse Gillespie and Miss Margaret Winfrey. The former, debutante daughter of Mrs. Julian Gillespie, recently was graduated from Notre Dame College in Baltimore. Miss Winfrey, student at Finch Junior College, is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. J. Nelson.

In the club dining room small tables for 10 accommodated the 150 guests. Almost all the season's debutantes were there, as were their friends. The two sons of Colonel and Mrs. Wozencraft, Lieut. John M. Wozencraft, just graduated from West Point, and Frank M. Wozencraft, a graduate of Williams College, were in attendance. There also was a group of John's classmates from the Military Academy.

Manhattan Memos

New York, June 21.—Judy Holliday, who, with Paul Douglas in "Born Yesterday," received the top notices of the season, refused movie offers which came to her from almost every Hollywood studio. A few days ago Leo McCarey telephoned about a movie role for her. "Is this a big, important role?" asked Miss Holliday. "I've had many offers, but I won't do a movie unless there's a big, important role in it for me" . . . "It couldn't be a bigger or more important role," said McCarey. "It's a two-character movie to be called 'Adam and Eve'" . . . "It could be a bigger and more important role," corrected Miss Holliday, who probably will sign the contract. "It could be 'Eve and Adam.'"

Rita Hayworth

The crash-landing of the Europe-bound Constellation on which Laurence Olivier was a passenger climaxed an eventful three days for the British star. On Monday his movie, "Henry V," opened at the City Center. On Saturday he closed the Old Vic run on Broadway. On Sunday he received an honorary degree from Tufts University and then missed the New York plane . . . The actor gave the best performance of his career Sunday afternoon when, in cap and gown, he walked down the aisle in the colorful procession at Tufts, smiling broadly to the assemblage. But each step he took was agonizingly painful. For in the last second of "The Critic" which closed the Old Vic run, Olivier fell from the curtains, as he had done without harm in previous performances, and sprained both his ankles.

Dr. Chengting T. Wang, the former Chinese Ambassador to Washington who now is vice president of the Rotary International, had a conference this week with an officer of Americans United. "We Chinese have had longer experience than all of you in world organization," the diplomat stated. "In America, for example, the family unit consists of father, mother, brother and sister. But in China the family unit consists of father, mother, brother, sister, in-laws, cousins, aunts, uncles. In this way we learned, at an early age, that everyone everywhere around us is a member of one big family."

General Eisenhower will make a trip to South America this summer. . . . His book, "Eisenhower's Own Story of the War," will be rushed by Arco Press for publication on June 27 . . . Rita Hayworth probably will play the Judy Holliday role in the movie adaptation of "Born Yesterday" . . . Orson Welles has been turning down $10,000-a-week offers to do his magic act in cafes. At the same time Mr. Welles is living on the $62.50 which he, as producer of "Around the World," pays himself as star of the musical . . . Tom Benton has written the foreword to a new book, "The Rape of La Belle," an expose of the painting racket in Old Masters.

Former Navy Lieut. Armand Deutsch, the millionaire head of the new movie company, Story Productions, was in Hollywood discussing an American Veterans Committee party to be given at the home of Tyrone Power. A suggestion was made that Marshall Field be invited to make a speech to the veterans there . . . Former Commodore Gene Markey asked: "Do you suppose we'll have trouble getting a plane seat for him?" . . . Former Capt. Shepard Traube said: "If Marshall Field can't get a plane seat, then no one can." . . . "Say, if Marshall Field can't get a plane seat," murmured Deutsch, "then democracy is working so well that it's frightening."

John Golden, the producer, usually has his eye-glasses resting atop his forehead, while in his pocket are two pairs of eyeglasses. "Then why do you keep one pair on your head?" he was asked. Golden explained: "In my pocket I carry my near-sighted pair and my far-sighted pair. I can't tell which is which, without using the pair on my head." . . . Sam Jaffe and Zero Mostel will be costarred in "The Milky Way" at Long Beach the week of July 9. . . . William Steinberg, the conductor who founded the Palestine Symphony Orchestra, where he met Toscanini, is on his way home from Rio now. Toscanini wanted him to follow the Maestro in Milan, but the coveted invitation didn't arrive until Steinberg was en route to Brazil.

When Sergt. George Baker's book, "The Sad Sack," was published, he sent an advance copy to his agent, Albert Taylor. The author's inscription read: "To Albert, the Sad Sack's Best Friend—That Is, If He Makes Him a Rich Man." . . . When Sergeant Baker was discharged from the Army, Taylor arranged for the newspaper syndication of the Sad Sack, a radio series, and for the publication of a book to follow the first one which, by this time, had sold over 300,000 copies . . . The second book, to be called "The New Sad Sack," is ready. Baker sent his agent an advance copy. The inscription read: "To Albert, the Sad Sack's Best Friend."

On July 19 NBC's "The Mystery Theater," which competes with the Ellery Queen series, will broadcast the dramatization of H. W. Roden's "Wake for a Lady." Author Roden, who is vice president of American Home Products, sponsors the rival Ellery Queen series. . . . Oscar Levant, who has three children, was explaining why he's glad they're all girls. "I wouldn't know how to control boys, because I seem to lack authority," said Levant. "But with my daughters, I'm just one of the girls." . . . On the day Lou Holtz learned that his wife was divorcing him, he told George Burns: "It hurts me in three places." Then he pointed to his head, to his heart and to his wallet. Twenty-four hours later he met Burns again, and said: "Now it hurts me in only one place." And he pointed to his wallet.

Jim Moriarty, who died this week, was one of the most popular cafe hosts in New York's night life. At his last post, the Barberry room, Moriarty became an intimate of the most influential men in America. One of these friendships, with Donald M. Nelson, helped shatter the myth about the remarkable drinking capacity of Soviet diplomats. For when Moriarty visited Nelson in Washington the then-head of WPB gave him a bottle of vodka which Stalin had presented to him. Moriarty finished it alone, in two hours. And as proof of how slight was its effect upon him, he not only managed to travel back to New York safely but also got into a gin-rummy game with two strangers aboard the train, and won $26 from them.

Inexpensive New Product Works Wonders

Now You Can Rid Home of Mildew

By Martha Ellyn

WHEN big-hearted Bill Jenkins told his wife not to bother about ironing his shirts before she went for a visit to Williamsport, Md., he forgot to reckon with Washington's well-known humidity. The shirt shortage had made an inroad into Bill's supply, too.

When Bill finally got down to his last few shirts, he dampened them so he could iron them.

As he tells the story, he carefully wrapped the dampened shirts in a Turkish towel, expecting to iron them on the morrow. But the morrow found him out playing golf and on to a friend's house for dinner. Ironing was delayed. Two days later when Bill was ready to do his chore. He unrolled the shirts. Black spots and an unpleasant smell greeted him—yes, it was mildew.

Fortunately the unsightly growth was not so bad that it couldn't be helped by laundering and drying in the bright sunlight. Bill's story has a happy ending because he did salvage his shirts. But he isn't taking any chances on mildew's ruining other hard-to-get merchandise.

Experience Typical

Bill has been thoroughly innoculated with homemaking tips, because he is the announcer on Elinor Lee's "Home Service Daily" program on WTOP. He availed himself of all the information he could get on mildew. He looked around the Jenkins home for spotted walls, at trunks and luggage, upholstery of the furniture, old shoes and even his sport's equipment. He found a few tell-tale spots.

And Bill says, "Call this condition what you will, mildew, mold or fungi, it's something to be considered here in Washington where things are rather consistently damp all through the summer months."

Bill Jenkins' experience with mildew is typical here. Mildew is apt to form on anything, any place where there is dampness. And dampness can be caused by sudden temperature changes, such as we are experiencing constantly in Washington.

But believe it or not here's one problem of living today which can be solved. No one is going to contribute to waste these days—take the chance of having mildew ruin laundry that has been dampened and rolled up for ironing, clothes hanging in closets, upholstered furniture or bedding. Neither should shoes or leather goods, particularly when well-oiled or polished (mildew feeds on grease too) be left as an easy prey for this destructive growth.

Some people are of the opinion that drying out mildew in sunlight or keeping an electrict light burning in closets will make things right. But such measures will not kill the mildew, even if it may hold it dormant for a time.

Dampness Cuase

Physically mildew that is visibile to the eye is a collection of a great many tiny spores, which may include only one or many types of fungi. Some varieties multiply by dividing in half, each half afters its growth starting a a new chain of innumerable similar divisions. Other varieties grow in "bags" which, when full grown, burst to send thousands of spores floating into the air.

Mildew grows wherever there is even a slight dampness. It doesn't require heat and may thrive in temperatures are low as 32 degrees, dampness alone is sufficient to create and maintain conditions favorable to its growth. Even in reputedly dry areas mildew may grow freely in basements and cellars that lie below the grade of surrounding earth.

As mildew grows it feeds on the surface to which it is attached. Some types feed on protein substances, such as wool and leather; others, on materials made of cellulose, such as cotton, rayon, wall paper, etc.

But don't despair. There is a preventative. Scientists have discovered that a chemical product will provide protection from mildew growth and stains for periods ranging from three months to several years.

Uses Countless

This mildew preventative also is inexpensive. For most common household purposes, it may be diluted with liberal quantities of water so that one bottle can supply many gallons of mildew proofing.

The garbage pail, always a receptacle that needs attention, may be rid of all odors and their return prevented by weekly use of this product. Refrigerators and bread boxes, also may be wiped with a solution of this preventive and be kept free of mildew and unpleasant odors. In fact, this can be used everywhere in the home—to protect shoes, closets, attics, basements, walls, floors, rugs, slipcovers and upholstery.

Ond it's easily applied—by brushing, spraying, daubing or by dipping. It comes in convenient pint and quart size bottles and is sold by department, hardware, drug and grocery stores.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Be SMART

6-22

IN THE COMING SEASON beach coats will have virtually as much fashion importance as swim suits. Such fabrics as beautiful butcher linens—zelan treated for lasting freshness—are smartly tailored... softer cottons and rayon shantungs often appear in the new flare lines—not more than a fraction of an inch longer than youthfully brief suits!

TERRY

WELL, TERRY, WE PICKED UP THE DRAGON LADY'S CARGO, KEPT SLITS FROM WALKING OUT ON THE DEAL—AND NOW WE'RE OFF FOR HOME AND FIRESIDE! HOW DO YOU SCORE IT SO FAR?
WE DON'T HAVE THE USUAL POTENTIAL PIRATES ABOARD, HOTSHOT, BUT SLITS WANTING TO WALK OUT LEADS ME TO THINK SOMETHING'S COMING, BUT I DON'T KNOW WHAT!
SOMEWHERE BETWEEN TERRY'S PRESENT POSITION AND HIS DESTINATION, A GROUP OF FARMERS MOVES THE WALL OF A SHACK.
IT IS THE HOUR?
INDEED! THE DRAGON LADY IS ONE FOR THE PRECISE TIMING! I GO!

JOE PALOOKA

VINCE!
THIS WAY, JOE. COME ABOARD, MEN.
WHERE ARE WE GOING?
DOWN THE BAY. WE'RE LOADED FOR BEAR! THOUGHT YOU'D WANT TO GO ALONG.
THANK YOU, VINCE, I SURE DO!
SHOVE OFF!

MARY WORTH

THANK YOU, MRS. WORTH! I DON'T RESENT YOUR ADVICE--BUT I DON'T INTEND TO FOLLOW IT!--I'M GOING TO MARRY IAN McLANE!--BINNIE WILL GET OVER HER--SCHOOLGIRL HERO WORSHIP!
I HOPE SO, MISS ADAIR!
IF YOU DON'T MIND, I'LL SLIP UP AND SAY GOODNIGHT TO HER BEFORE I LEAVE!
MISS ADAIR!--HER DOOR IS LOCKED--AND SHE DOESN'T ANSWER---!

MYRTLE

I WANT YOUR FATHER TO DROP THIS DRESS OFF AT THE DRY CLEANERS
WILL YOU SEE THAT HE DOESN'T FORGET IT?
I'LL TIE A STRING AROUND HIS FINGER!
I'VE TRIED THAT, BUT HE ALWAYS FORGETS WHAT THE STRING IS FOR!
HE WON'T FORGET, THE WAY I TIE IT!

MICKEY FINN

YOU THINK THE ONE WITH THE MUSTACHE IS "DOLL FACE" MAHONEY?
YES--BUT WE CAN'T BE POSITIVE UNTIL THE CUSTOMS MEN GET HERE. THEY'VE BEEN WORKING WITH US!
WHERE'S THE SHERIFF? WE'D LIKE TO GET HIS STORY!
WE SENT HIM HOME! THE DOCTOR SAID HE HAD TO HAVE COMPLETE REST!
"THEN YOU KNEW THEY WERE DIAMOND SMUGGLERS, EH, PHIL?
NATURALLY! THAT'S WHY I BROUGHT THE CIGARS BACK! AND I'D HAVE CAPTURED THEM RIGHT IN THE STORE--IF MY GUN HADN'T JAMMED!

DIXIE DUGAN

WHY, A REVOLUTION WAS FOUGHT ON THOSE UNTOUCHED GROUNDS, MR. BRADFORD! THEY'RE SACRED!
WOULDN'T IT BE A FITTING PLACE FOR HOMES FOR SOME OF OUR G.I.'S THEN?
MR. BRADFORD--I WANT TO DO MY BIT TO HELP THE HOUSING SITUATION--AND I HAVE TO SOME EXTENT--BUT LET'S BE REASONABLE--
OH, MR. BRADFORD!!
YES?
WE FOUND SOMETHING IN THE WOODS YONDER--YOU'D BETTER COME!
YEAH?

-AN' I'M JUST GETTING STARTED--
THAT PINNACLE PIN COMPANY NEXT DOOR IS KILLING POOR MR. BIBBS! HE HASN'T HAD A NIGHT'S SLEEP IN WEEKS!
WITH ALL HIS MONEY, HE COULD BUY THEM OUT--THEN HE COULD REST AND RELAX!
I WONDER HOW MUCH OL' BIBBS WOULD PAY FOR A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP!
THEY'RE OFF!
DRAKE IS IN THE POLE POSITION!
AND IF HE HUGS THE TURNS, HE'LL WIN! SHORTY CAN'T PASS HIM ON THE OUTSIDE WITH THAT OUTBOARD!
DRAKE ISN'T SLIDING AN INCH! I-I GOTTA PASS HIM!...
IF THAT BAD STEERING KNUCKLE I PUT ON HIS CAR SNAPS, AND HE FLIPS OVER, I'M IN AN AWFUL SPOT BACK HERE!

Olds Elected Head of D. C. Bond Club

By S. Oliver Goodman

Edson B. Olds, veteran of 18 years in the investment business here, was elected president of the Washington Bond Club at the annual meeting yesterday.

Olds

Naming of officers was the only serious note in an otherwise all-day frolic of more than 240 investment dealers, their employes and guests at the Manor Club in Norbeck, Md.

Mr. Olds is a native of Washington and attended the University of Maryland. He entered the investment business in 1928 and has specialized in local securities. In 1933 he helped form the partnership of Goodwyn & Olds. Active in affairs of the Washington Stock Exchange, he served as its president in 1943.

Other officers of the Bond Club were chosen as follows: Harvey B. Gram of Johnston, Lemon & Co., vice president; J. Fenton Cramer of George M. Ferris & Co., secretary-treasurer; governors, William Coe of Mackall & Coe and Austin Rohrbaugh of Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukens.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

New York Cotton

New York, June 21 (AP).—Persistent mill buying and short covering supported a late upward movement in cotton futures today, with final prices at or near the best levels for the session to show net gains of 35 to 90 cents a bale.

Nervousness over the outcome of price control legislation brought out considerable New Orleans and local liquidation in early dealings, but declines were held in check by mill demand.

News that Senate-House conferees had agreed on a modified form of the Taft amendment, assuring manufacturers allowance for increased costs, touched off the late covering movement. Traders reasoned it would be constructive on textile operations and pointed to some measure of price decontrol despite administration opposition.
